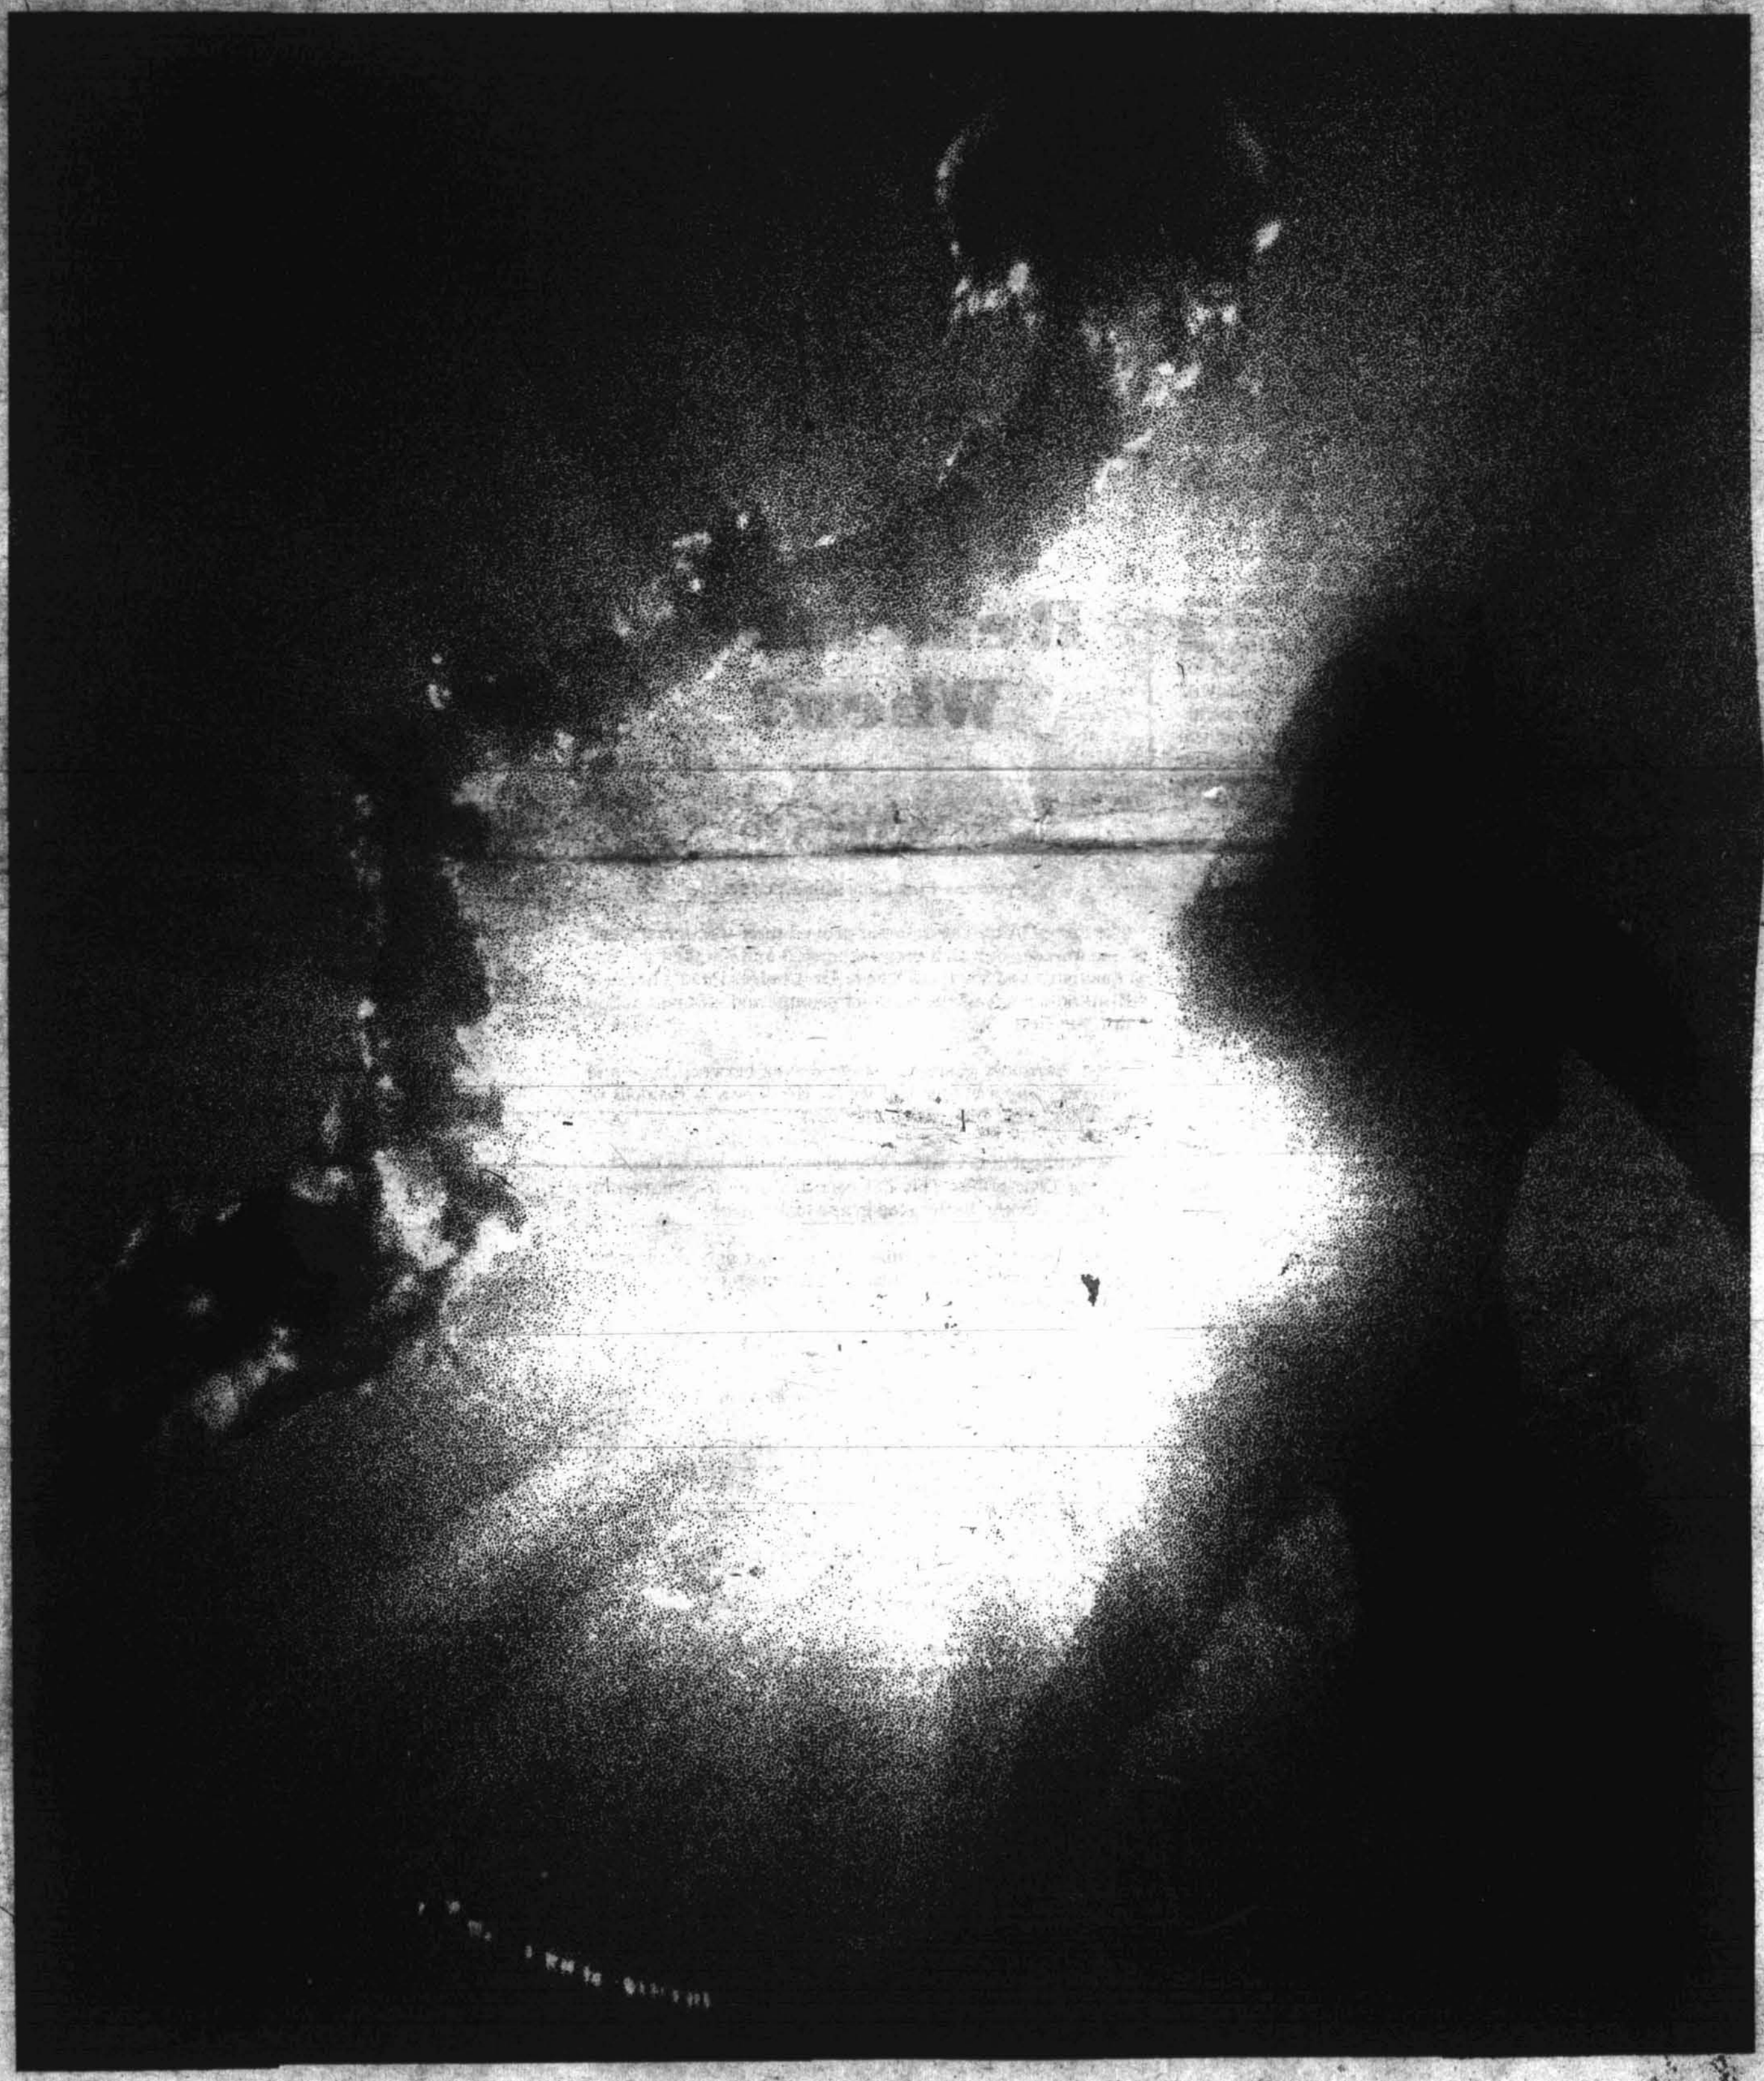
The Carmel Pine Cone

VOL. 57, NO. 25 15¢ PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, CALIF. 93921 36 Pages - 2 Sections June 24, 1971



A DIVER AND JELLYFISH rise in Carmel Bay waters in a sunburst as captured by Hayward photographer Bob Hollis. The photo was used in a controversial report on the proposed expansion of the Point Lobos underwater park. The city council is afraid recreational considerations included in the report will result in a "Coney Island." Oceanographer Jacques-Yves Cousteau says there are signs of "possible degradation" in the bay's ecosystem, while skindiver George Fraley states that bay sea life, "abundant" in 1950, is now sparse. For stories see pages 8 and 9.

Letters

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, please write only enough material to adequately cover the subject. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, although names may be withheld on request.

Dear Editor:

This is a plea to save the Forest Theatre. Firstly come the aesthetic reasons in which many of us are so interested. Secondly there are the practical and purely long term commercial reasons for its maintenance.

What other town in California has the cultural tradition of Carmel? What other has a beautiful natural open air theatre with its history of so many great actors and playwrights? And what lovely ghosts linger up there among the pines.

Carmel is now at the cross roads. The surrounding green belts are already threatened and now the Forest Theatre as well. Once gone they will be gone for ever and if this trend continues what then will we have to live with—and what will the tourists come for? Just a welter of traffic, shops, motels and gas stations? They may as well go to Gilroy or Watsonville (with apologies to these worthy places!)

Those who advocate keeping the Forest Theatre even in its run down state are not impractial. I think they are eminently practical. The theatre is utterly irreplaceable and essential to the atmosphere of Carmel.

Yours very truly,
BARBARA WEST

Kit Jones, the writer of this letter, was brought up in Carmel, and is the son of architect Robert Jones, who still makes his home here. Now a budding playwright in New York, he won approval from the New York Times drama critic, for his play, "Watch Pit," when it was presented at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

A youth of wide interests when he was growing up here, Kit became an Eagle Scout while he was a member of Carmel Boy Scout Troop No. 32, which is sponsored by the Carmel Rotary Club.

Dear Mr. Norberg:

I recently received a call from my mother informing me that you are actively involved in an attempt to raise funds to save the Forest Theater from destruction. I was appalled that anyone would even consider tearing down that theater. It is one of the most beautiful and ideally situated outdoor theaters I have ever seen. And I have seen quite a few from Oregon to Los Angeles to New York...to Greece.

Being in the Forest Theater on a summer night with a warm breeze blowing up from the sea and a full moon shining through the pines is one of the sweetest experiences a soul can have. It's a magical place, more suited to the creation of theater than any natural spot I can imagine. It's much too beautiful to tear down! Rather it should be refurbished and put to better use than it's had in the past. The big stage would be perfect for a Summer Festival of Greek or Elizabethan plays, or musicals, or operas, for occasional music and dance concerts...there are countless possibilities. And the small theater downstairs is perfect for the whole gammut of intimate theater pieces on a year round basis.

The Forest Theater should not be torn down. I am surprised at the city for even considering the possibility. I have always considered Carmel, the whole Monterey Peninsula, in fact, to be particularly rich in talent and feeling for the theater. At least 80 percent of my theatrical education was received in the community theaters in Carmel and Monterey. Not many people can say that of their home town.

I don't know. Maybe I'm just being sentimental, but it means a lot to me. I saw my first play there when I was just a child. I had my first real romance there. I acted in my first leading role there. I've seen many plays in that theater, both upstairs and down and I think it would be a crime if such a wonderful place were to be forsaken. There are so many things to recommend it. Its past history, the natural beauty of the surroundings, the possibilities for developing it into a viable, functioning festival theater.

I'm glad you are working to save it. I wish I could do something to help. One thing's for sure. If it is torn down Bert Heron's ghost will haunt those responsible for a long, long time. And when the day comes, mine will join him.

Good luck in your cause; it is a noble one.

Sincerely,
KIT JONES

Editor,
The Pine Cone:

I was intrigued with the picture in your June 10 issue entitled, "Good grief! What's he doing?"

The gentleman in the picture is a forester, apparently specializing in dendrology. In his right hand he holds a tree caliper used for determing tree diameter. With his left hand he is withdrawing an increment borer used for withdrawing a small core of wood. The annual rings appearing in the core can be counted to determine the age of the tree, and the various rates of growth over the years can be studied without cutting down the tree. The complicated mechanism around the tree trunk is probably being used to determine daily growth rate and the day - night fluctuations in trunk circumference.

I cannot be certain, but I believe the forester is George B. Sudworth, one of the most famous silviculturists-dendrologists in the U.S. He was author of many treatises on forestry, including "Forest Trees of the Pacific Slope." He was born in Kingston, Wisc., in 1864 and died in 1927. He revised his "Check List of Forest Trees of the United States" shortly before his death and it was the standard reference on U.S trees until it was revised again by Elbert Little Jr. in 1953.

Sincerely,
KEN TAYLOR

Remember When?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, June 23, 1921:

The Carmel Fire Department proved their worth last week by the manner in which they responded and handled the fire at Casanova and Eleventh Street. Dr. Chalres Peak's home is still standing only as the result of prompt and efficient action from our firemen.

Fred Wermuth, erstwhile stage driver between here and Monterey, was a visitor last week. He is now a resident of Petaluma, where he raises chickens.

The delinquent tax list for Monterey County can be found at the Pine Cone office. This list contains over fifty names of Carmel residents. Better stop in and look it over.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

COUNCILMEN ANDERSON and Brown attended the meeting last Saturday with Senator Grunsky and Assemblyman Wood. As you remember, this covered the matter of the extension of the Point Lobos Reserve from Cypress Point to Big Sur.

There was much discussion concerning use of these areas with regard to spearfishing, underwater trails, etc. It was the general consensus that much more work is necessary on this project but Senator Grunsky and Assemblyman Wood assured the group assembled that the Fish and Game Department, as well as the Beaches and Parks would be well screened and informed of the conditions there and of the requests of the groups involved.

I am asking the Pine Cone to print a copy of a letter which will be sent to all property owners explaining Section 1190 to 1196 of our code which deals with the sale of property including lots. If you have any questions regarding this section of our code, please feel free to call. The letter follows:

NOTICE TO ALL OWNERS OF RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY IN THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA:

Sections 1190 through 1196 of the Municipal Code of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea require that, prior to entering into an "agreement of sale," transfer, exchange or any agreement which provides for the transfer of title from one person to another of any residential property, a report is required. This report must be obtained from the City Building Inspector, located in City Hall, Monte Verde Street between Ocean and 7th Avenues, in Carmel (phone: 624-6835; address: P.O. Box G, Carmel 93921). The Report of Residential Zoning and Building Records is obtained by the owner, or the real estate or other agent representing the owner. If the property is not sold within six months of obtaining a report, a new report must be obtained before the property is sold or transferred.

Failure to obtain the report, as required, is a misdemeanor and may be prosecuted as such by the City.

The purpose of the report is to assure that the buyer of residential property within the city is furnished a report of matters of city record pertaining to the authorized use, zoning, occupancy and classification of property prior to completion of the sale of the property.

The owner of the property must obtain the report. The owner is then required to deliver a copy of the report to the buyer prior to the consummation of the sale of the property. The owner shall obtain a receipt from the buyer for delivery of said report and shall then deliver the receipt to the Building Inspector as evidence of compliance.

All owners of residential property within our city are urged to cooperate in the above.

Sincerely,
B.F. LAIOLO, Mayor
City of Carmel-by-the-Sea

New law may bar building projects over parking lots

Due to a code section passed last year, two proposed projects concerning structures being constructed over parking lots probably would not be allowed, Carmel City Attorney William Burleigh told the Pine Cone yesterday.

Burleigh said it is his interpretation of the ordinance that parking lots cannot be roofed over, but that the commission might see the ordinance in another way.

The matter came up at last week's planning commission meeting when Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham told the commission that the owners of the Vagabond House Inn, Dolores and Fourth, had requested permission to build a single-family residence on a slope over an existing parking lot.

Cunningham said it was a proposal worth considering in that the city has often proclaimed its dislike for too much paving and the concept of constructing structures over parking lots could be a means of camouflage.

Mayor Barney Laiolo then said that a proposal may be made in the future to construct a hotel-apartment complex at Lincoln and Sixth over a parking area.

The proposal, he said, would take in the library parking lot.

Commissioner Fred Keeble said the approach of structures over parking areas "might be advantageous" and Chairman Olaf Dahlstrang appointed an ad hoc committee to study the matter.

Council deadlock on salaries

After a closed session of nearly 2½ hours, the city council at a special meeting Monday couldn't come to a decision or agreement on fiscal 1971-72 salaries for the city's five department heads.

Mayor Barney Laiolo said that he would prefer that all council members be on hand for the final decision.

Councilman Frank Falge was absent from the meeting but was expected to have been on hand when the council continued its deliberations last night.

Outgoing City Forester says city is not doing enough to save Carmel's urban forest

This may sound like a strange admission for a man who is proud of his work, but City Forester Robert Tate feels that Carmel's forest is in worse shape now than when he arrived three years ago.

The admission bothers Tate, who leaves here June 25 to become city forester in Ann Arbor, Mich. Shortly before his departure, he explained how the situation has developed.

"The major problem facing the City of Carmel is the attrition of the urban forest in the business district," he said. "The trees are getting old and are dying and are not being replaced."

What brings people to Carmel? Tate asked rhetorically. Environment, beach, shops and trees.

"We can't change the weather, the beaches or the shops," he said. "Our only renewable resource is the forest and the kind of forest we have is directly proportional to the amount of care we put into it."

Tate listed three solutions to the problem of attrition. The first is to plant the kinds of trees that made Carmel famous: Monterey Pine, Coast Live Oak and Monterey Cypress. The second is to plant the kinds of trees that do well in a city environment but for which Carmel is not famous, trees that cities plant all over the world. Sycamore is an example.

"I would like to make it plain that these are the types of trees that are planted everywhere," Tate said.

The third solution, if one wants to call it that, is not to do anything.

"There are streets in the business district right now that have no trees on them," Tate pointed out. "There are streets that have been that way for years."

The young forester thinks that the first solution – planting trees of the type which helped make Carmel famous – is the only one worth striving for. Some minds must change before the solution is feasible, however.

"It's going to require a lot of money, much more than the city is accustomed to putting into the forest program," he said. "There's also going to have to be a major policy decision from the city council. They have to ask themselves, do we want to plant the kinds of trees which made Carmel famous and are we going to create the conditions where those trees will grow?

Tate pointed out that the "character trees" -- the pines and cypresses -- produce roots within 18 inches of the surface which seek wide fields of nourishment.

"Obviously if you plant in a sidewalk area the roots are going to lift the sidewalks within four or five years," he said. "Then you can either cut the roots – and I think the effect of that is fairly obvious – or you can let people trip over the roots, cut their faces and sue the city."

In order to plant character trees, Tate would like to create a system of "mini-parks" within the business district. He sees six planting spaces per block – three to each side of the street. One of two trees would be planted in each space, and there might be benches and a shrub or two. Each space would occupy one parking space.

Tate estimates that the total number of parking spaces lost to the business district would range from 100 to 200 in number.

"I don't say we should cut out all parking spaces," he affirmed. "But I think the additional trees would be more desirable for Carmel's future."

Tate does not dismiss the second solution – to plant the more familiar types of city trees. It is the course of action being taken by the forestry department at present. But he is not enthusiastic about the policy.

"They're beautiful trees, they're less of a problem, they require less maintenance, they live longer – but they are not Monterey Pines," he said.

Has the city forester any indication that the business community is receptive to the idea of more trees? Tate believes they are, on the basis of an informal poll he took of 60 percent of the business owners or renters along Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. He was interested in planting additiinal trees along the street.

Has the city forester any indication that the business community is receptive to the idea of more trees? Tate believes they are, on the basis of an informal poll he took of 60 percent of the business owners or renters along Dolores between Ocean and Seventh. He was interested in planting additional trees along the street.

"Everyone said yes, they'd like more trees, but not pine trees," Tate said. "Again, that strikes me as the attitude of Every City U.S.A."

The forester is disturbed not only by the scarcity of trees in the business district, but also by the deteriorating condition of the older trees growing there. He believes that the prime years of the character trees, the period when they attain a majesty that makes people sit up and take notice, are during the final 20 years of life.

"This is the period when the trees really start giving something back," said Tate. "I don't believe people come from far distances to see young trees. I think they're interested in the older, prettier, larger trees."

A healthy specimen of one of the character trees lives to about age 80. Many of Carmel's giants were planted during the Devendorf era—about 65 years ago.

"Since these trees were planted very little care has been given to the city forest," said Tate. "There hadn't been any tree maintenance performed on a scheduled basis until I came. Obviously this suggests a considerable backlog of work and we simple don't have the staff to handle it."

Tate suspects that some people in Carmel feel he is asking for too much too fast. When asked to be more specific, he was unable to pinpoint people.

"There just seems to be a prevailing attitude that no one's ever worked on trees here, why start now? I've talked to several tree experts in this area and they all feel that Carmel needs a lot more men and equipment in the forestry department."

Tate pointed out that Salinas, which has approximately 16,000 trees, maintains a tree crew in excess of 10 men. Ann Arbor, with 35,000 trees, has a crew with more than 20 members. Carmel, in comparison, with 10,000 trees, has a four-man crew, excluding the city forester. And this is a new crew, one which was formed only after Tate's arrival.

Furthermore, Ann Arbor spends approximately $10 annually per tree under its forest program, while Carmel allots approximately $5 per tree.

"And yet Ann Arbor is not known primarily for its trees, while Carmel is," said Tate. "You can see where Carmel stacks up."

Tate maintains that the deteriorating of the city forest can be arrested only by increased resources for the forestry department.

"We need a lot of men and equipment to catch up, to give something back to a forest that has been giving to us for years," he said. "And it has to be more than a token gesture. I leave it up to you whether four men constitutes a token gesture."

How many men would be necessary to halt the slide?

"I don't really know," replied Tate, "but we do need a lot more men than we have now simply to catch up. Four men couldn't keep up with the demands of the forest on a scheduled basis even if the forest had been cared for properly during the past 50 years."

Tate feels that four men could remain busy just trimming trees, and he considers this a beautification measure, exclusive of other important jobs like planting and irrigation.

One measure the forester feels would help alleviate the work overload is to contract certain kinds of work such as dead tree removal.

"I'm not interested in dead trees," he said. "They are simply a disposal problem. Why should the forestry department waste money on big saws in order to cut down an occasional dead tree? With a contract, we pay in proportion only to the amount of trees removed. I think this would be a great thing for the taxpayers."

Tate asks for realism in facing the department's dilemma.

"We're not talking about anything but money," he said. "The city has to be willing to spend as much money as necessary."

How much?

"I don't know," said the forester. "I've been asking for five men since I came here. Maybe the extra man would give us some indication of marginal utility, so that we could make some estimate. I'd really like to have found out."

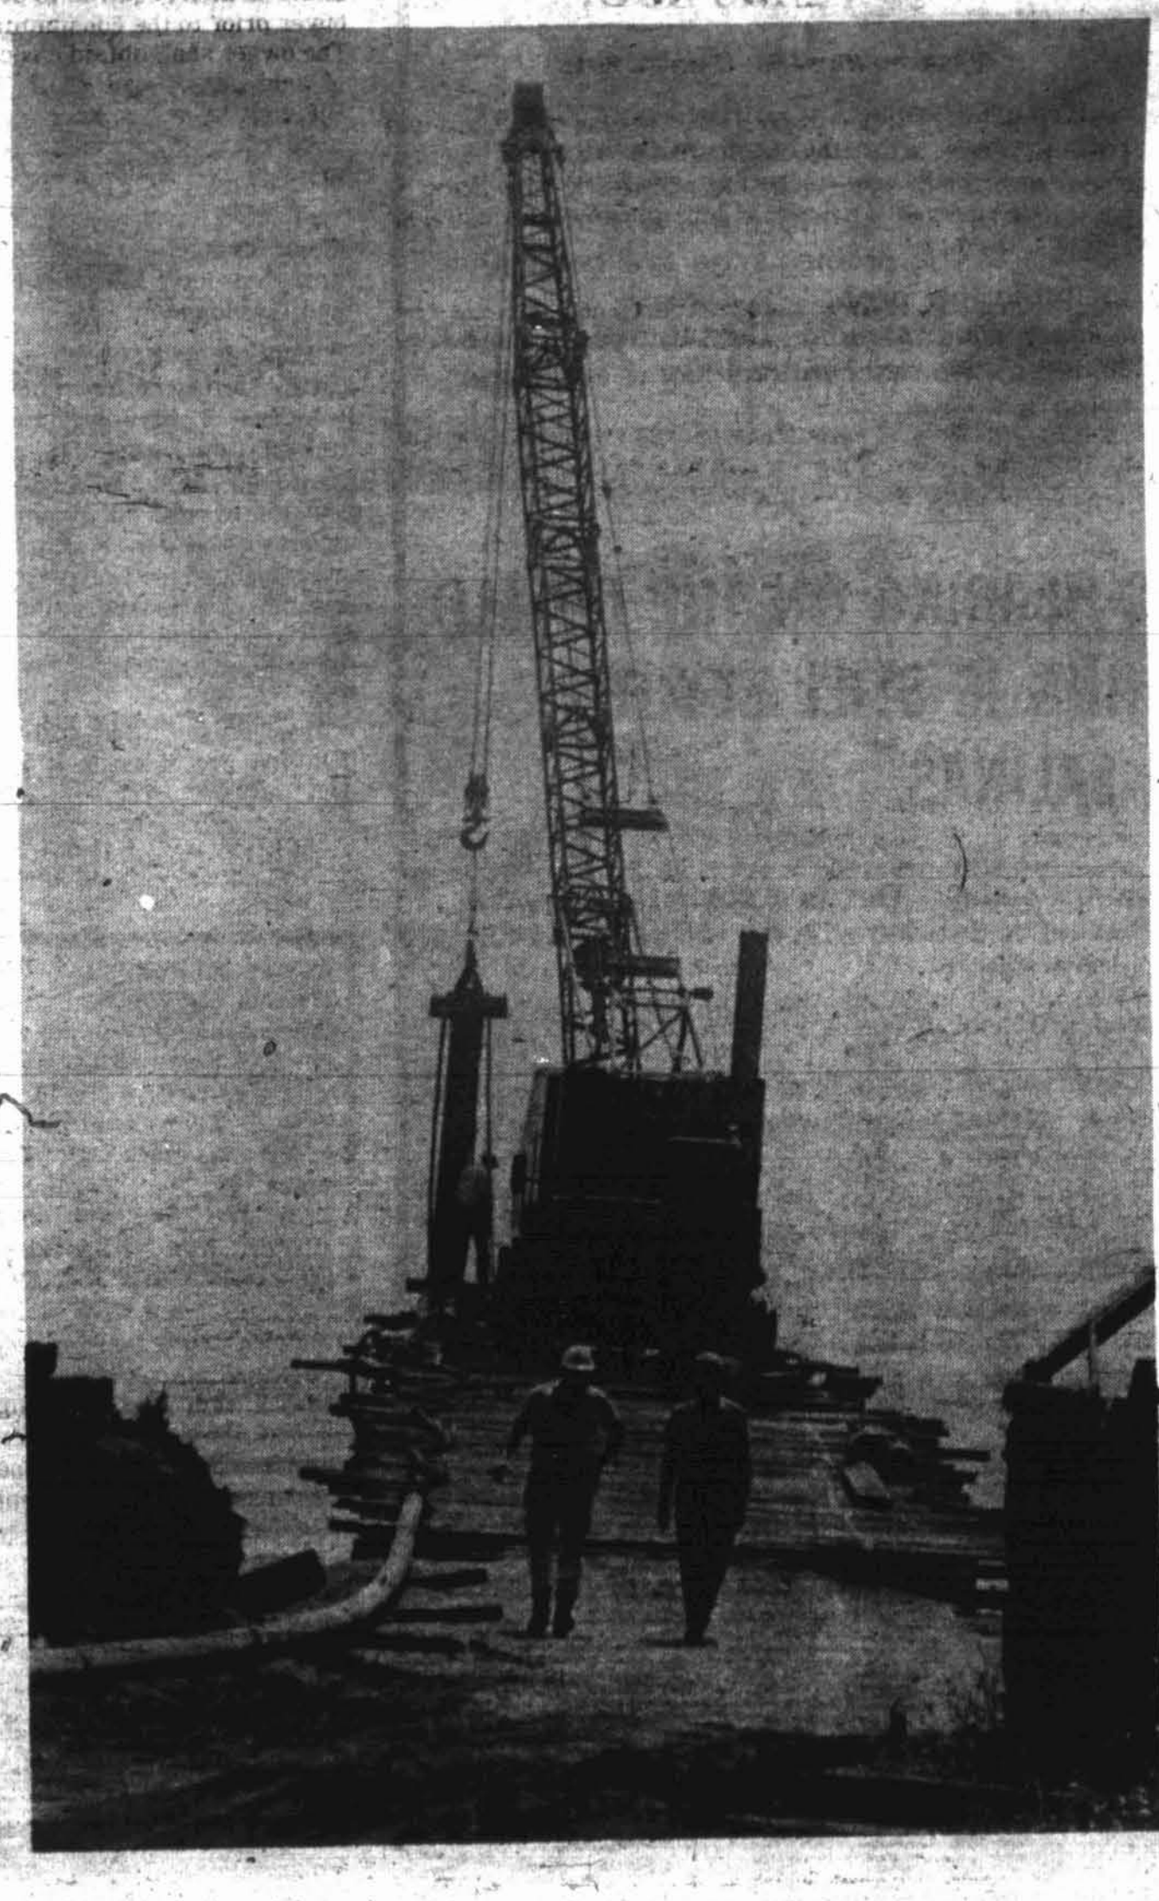
Tate feels that some of his warnings about the state of the city forest have largely been ignored.

"People will see a tree with a fatal disease and say, 'I don't see anything wrong, it's still green and standing, isn't it?' Well, you can meet a man with a fatal disease and not realize it. The city hired me to diagnose problems. If they don't solve the problems, I have to conclude that they don't want the advice."

Tate has been known, in private conversation, to say some salty things about the position of his department in the city government. The department is included in the Public Works Department, and the forester approaches the council through a city forestry commission. He has said that the department is unnecessarily hamstrung by this setup, but during the interview refrained from expanding on these remarks publicly.

"I think the City of Carmel should have a forestry department which is responsible to the council for the maintenance and care of the urban forest and parks," he commented.

"I don't want to sound totally negative," he concluded. "My point is, we've got such a unique thing here, let's start caring for it."



THE FOG that rolled into Carmel Bay Monday broke a beautiful sunny spell and also helped obscure the top of the crane being used to construct the Carmel Sanitary District's new 600-foot outfall line. George T.C. Smith used a telephoto lens taking this picture, foreshortening what is actually a distance of 300 feet between the two men and the crane. The trestle is being constructed 600 feet out into the bay near the mouth of the Carmel River. The two men are, left, Heinrich Jurgens, an engineer for Kennedy Engineers of San Francisco, the district's consulting firm, and Al Hagen, superintendent of the project for Healy-Tibbitts Construction Company of San Francisco, the contractors.

Askew of Carmel, is one of the candidates in the 1971 Sweetheart contest of the California Rodeo which will be held July 15-18 in Salinas. Her entry is being sponsored by the Carmel Rotary Club. Mary Lynn has competed in numerous junior rodeos in Livermore, Visalia, Porterville, King City, Oakdale and Los Banos, among others. In fact, she comes from a rodeo family. Seek 5,000 signatures this weekend for proposed Park and Open Space District

Thursday, Friday and Saturday are the key days in a major drive to collect the signatures of registered voters who support the formation of a regional park and open space district for the Monterey Peninsula.

Shopping centers, post offices and many stores will be manned by volunteers from the Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club, the Monterey Audubon Society and the Peninsula chapters of the League of Women Voters and the American Institute of Architects.

Their efforts will be to gather more than 5,000 signatures of registered voters, one of the necessary steps toward getting the proposal included on the ballot next November.

An application to form the district, whose boundaries would coincide with the Monterey Peninsula College district and include all of Carmel, Carmel Valley and the coast down to Big Sur, was approved by the Local Agency Formation Commission in April.

If the effort is to succeed, at least 5,000 valid legal signatures supporting the district must be filed with the Board of Supervisors by July 1.

As soon as the signatures are certified, the supervisors would then call a public hearing. After that, if the supervisors voted in favor of the proposal, the district would be placed on the November ballot.

According to the committee sponsoring the proposal, the district would "acquire scenic lands and hold them for open space and recreational use."

To do this, the district would be empowered to levy a tax of 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation. It could also borrow money, incur indebtedness and issue bonds up to 5 percent of the assessed valuation of real and personal property within the district.

If approved by voters, the district would be governed by a board of five or seven elected directors (the number would be set by the supervisors). Each director would be nominated and selected from a subdistrict or "ward", and each subdistrict would have to contain an approximately equal number of electors.

New territory could be annexed to the proposed district from time to time by obtaining LAFCO approval and a majority vote at an election held among residents in the new territory.

The district would be created under the same State law which established the East Bay Regional Park District in Oakland and Berkeley. A similar effort to establish a regional park and open space district is now underway on the San Francisco Peninsula in parts of San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

Coalition sponsors color film on environment

"Multiply and Subdue the Earth," a feature-length color film on the environment will be presented Wednesday evening, June 30, at 8 o'clock in Sunset Cultural Center Auditorium as a public service by the Carmel Area Coalition. The group is a conservation-oriented organization of concerned citizens "dedicated to preservation of our unique environment through orderly low density land development."

"Multiply and Subdue the Earth," produced by Public Broadcast Laboratory and viewed on educational television, has met with wide acclaim by the public and experts alike. Ian McHarg, an ecologist of the University of Pennsylvania and author of "Design With Nature," is the principal narrator of the film.

Air, noise and water pollution are discussed, as well as the problems of sewage and other waste disposal. The main thrust of the film, however, is directed at "greedy and often mindless exploitation of our basic resource, land," a Coalition release said.

Considerable film footage is devoted to subjects of current interest to Peninsula residents—the problems of building on river flood plains, coastal sand dunes, and in forests. Examples in Southern California, Santa Clara County and Lake Tahoe are cited as prime instances of how to despoil the environment.

The role of public officials in zoning matters and the tax structure are also closely scrutinized. McHarg's thesis is that in order to save what is left of our environment we must learn to design with Nature, not against Nature, the Coalition said.

As "Multiply and Subdue the Earth" is being presented as a public service there will be no admission charge. Concerned citizens are urged to attend and to invite their friends, the Coalition said.

Where should we build our cities of the future?
Who are the polluters of our environment?
Should we ever build in a flood plain?
What are other communities doing with regard to overdevelopment?

There is an outstanding documentary film that answers some of these questions and we invite you to see it as our guests.

As a public service, the Carmel Area Coalition has made arrangements for a special showing at Sunset Cultural Center of "Multiply and Subdue the Earth", an excellent color film on overdevelopment and zoning problems throughout the United States. The date is Wednesday, June 30 at 8 p.m. The picture has appeared on National Educational Television stations, including K.Q.E.D., and has previously been shown at Monterey Peninsula College and Carmel High School. It has been uniformly well-received and we are bringing it back because of its significance and its pertinence to the problems we are currently facing in this area.

Mark your calendar: Sunset Center, June 30, 8 p.m. No reservations. Come early and bring a friend.

REMINDER: THE NEXT PUBLIC HEARING ON THE ODELLO APPLICATION FOR REZONING IS STILL SET FOR JULY 28 IN SALINAS.

Despite City Reconstruction Company's announced withdrawal from the development, revisions of the proposed 1844 unit plan are still being submitted to a subcommittee of the County Planning Commission by the original architect, and an amended plan may be made public soon. The uncertainty as to what is likely to result from this period of negotiation, before the next public hearing, points up the importance of reviewing the provisions of the Peninsula Area General Plan and developing some strong public policy on the question of what population density per acre is reasonable and appropriate at the mouth of the Valley. This is a public matter and should be decided with the full participation of the public.

You can help in the fight to save this beautiful area from unreasonable overdevelopment by expressing your views on the subject directly to your Board of Supervisors and your appointed representatives on the County Planning Commission, County Courthouse, Salinas 93901. After all, they make the decisions that will affect the character of this community for years to come, and they need to know your opinions. Time is growing short. Let them hear from you today.

Ben Maddow to judge Film-makers Festival

Ben Maddow, distinguished screenwriter-director, will judge the fourth annual Monterey Independent Film-makers Festival Aug. 22- Aug. 28 at Carmel's Village Theatre, a new location. Maddow has among his credits such outstanding films as "The Asphalt Jungle" and "Intruder in the Dust." He co-authored the screenplay of Genet's "The Balcony" and was co-author-director of "The Savage Eye," an unrelenting examination of the horrors of a lonely life in the city.

"Held previously in facilities provided by Monterey Peninsula College, the festival was moved," according to Eugene Newmann, its coordinator, "in order to insure that every film chosen by the festival selection committee will be shown to the public."

Two thousand dollars in prize money will be awarded this year. "In an attempt to provide a more equitable arrangement," said Newmann, "$1000 will be awarded by the judge and an equal amount by the festival committee."

Sixteen millimeter films independently made here and abroad during the last year are the fare of the festival. The makers of these films operate outside the normal commercial channels and their products are short, experimental, challenging and frequently anti-establishment.

An innovation this year will be a symposium investigating the direction of contemporary films, to be held on Sunday, Aug. 29. Besides the judge (Maddow) and selection committee members, participants in the seminar will be Irvin Kirshner, director of "Loving" and "The Luck of Ginger Coffey;" Jameson Goldner, assistant professor of Film at San Francisco State College and film study consultant to the State of California Department of Education; Robert Sitton, film reviewer for radio station KPFA; and Prescott Wright, co-director, Short Film Division of the San Francisco Film Festival. All film-makers present will also be invited to take part.

"The symposium is the first step in a plan to broaden the character of the festival," said Newmann. "We anticipate a move, perhaps as early as next year, to a location where combined projection and discussion facilities would permit a week-long immersion in the medium."

The festival was established in 1968 to bring to the Central Coast modern independent film, as well as to provide an outlet and encouragement to independent film-makers. It has grown rapidly; in its third year 170 films were screened by the committee, of which 50 were selected for exhibition. This year in excess of 200 entries are anticipated. Several entries from abroad were received last year and special efforts have been made to encourage more overseas entries for 1971.

A look at the results of the 1970 film season indicates that the Monterey Independent Film-Makers Festival has moved into the first rank of such events in the country. A substantial number of films recognized at Monterey were selected for national awards by other longer established film festivals.

The three top prize winners at Monterey last year, "I am Joaquin," "This is the Home of Mrs. Levant Graham," and "Celebration: the Counter-Inaugural, 1969," are representative of film-makers' urgent concern over the deepest problems in our society.

For information, entry forms, or ticket reservations, write to Monterey Film-Makers Festival, P.O. Box 321, Pacific Grove, or call 375-3453, 372-2248.

Working together in theatre leads to marriage

St. Mary's By the Sea in Pacific Grove was the setting for the marriage of Barbara Louise Mann to Mark Oman of Carmel on June 19 with the Rev. Allan R. Wolter officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray M. Mann of Pacific Grove and the groom is the son of Mr. Paul Oman and Mrs. Mary Bird of Los Angeles.

The bride wore a floor-length white A-line gown with lace overlay and trim highlighted with pearls on cuffs and bodice. She carried white roses and stephanotis and wore a short veil with pearl-trimmed headpiece. She was given in marriage by her father.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Jimmy Getz of Pacific Grove, with Miss Peggy Bennet of Santa Rosa and Mrs. Larry Deimler of Monterey serving as attendants. They wore floor-length green gowns with long sleeves and daisy borders and carried white daisy bouquets.

Ken Shapiro of Los Angeles was best man, with the bride's brother, Larry, and Lee Gross of Encino acting as ushers.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the Cypress West Inn in Carmel.

The bride is a graduate of Pacific Grove High School, MPC and Chico State College. She is employed as reservations manager for Holiday Inn in Monterey.

The groom was graduated from San Fernando Valley State College. He is a writer and representative of Little People Thought Factory.

The couple met last summer in Carmel while working on the production of "Anything Goes" at the Circle Theater.

After a honeymoon in San Diego and La Jolla, they will return to the Peninsula and plan to live in Monterey or Carmel.

Gallwey elected symphony association president

Maestro Haymo Taeuber declared that the quality of the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra has improved at the recent annual meeting of the Monterey County Symphony Association at the Monterey home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ehrman.

Ehrman, completing his term as president of the association, praised the symphony guild for their fund-raising efforts, and thanked the members of the board who had worked with him through the successful 25th Jubilee Season.

W. Edgar Gallwey of Carmel was elected to succeed Ehrman. Gallwey, formerly president of Vacu-Dri Corporation in Oakland, is retired.

Taeuber, conductor of the symphony orchestra, reported on the season's accomplishments and expressed his satisfaction with the orchestra. He commented that the quality had improved primarily because he was able to stabilize the basic orchestra membership. With less change in orchestra personnel, the musicians worked well as an entity. He commended the work of John Farr, personnel manager for the orchestra, and stressed the importance of this position. Appreciation was also expressed for the work of Mrs. Earl Oren, librarian.

Taeuber's report on the Seattle conference of the American Symphony Orchestra League which he and James Glaser, former symphony president attended, was on the need for government support of the arts. Several small European nations such as Austria, Germany and Sweden spend over $2 per capita for the arts, and on this continent, Canada spends $1.40, whereas the United States spends only 7½ cents per capita to enhance the quality of life through the nation's cultural arts, he said.

Reporting on the Orchestral Workshop for Youth held at Monterey Peninsula College, Taeuber described the innovative technique used to give students an insight into symphonic playing.

Stoddard Johnston of K-Wave was thanked by Mr. Ehrman for the broadcasts of Carmel concerts. The symphony is heard by some 10,000 people who attend the 18 concerts in Monterey, Carmel and Salinas, but it reaches many thousands more through the Masterwork Hour broadcasts, Ehrman said.

Mrs. John Beahan who begins her second season as manager and publicity director of the symphony, also received commendation and thanks from Ehrman.

Mrs. Rody Holt, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following slate to be elected to the governing board for varying terms: Harold Apger, Jack Erwin, George Fortune, Hugo Gerstl, Stoddard Johnston, Robert M. Hinrichs, Mrs. Roy Lasseter, Dr. Gibb Madsen, Mrs. Thomas Roper, Jascha Veissi, B.E. Hartsook, Mrs. Ted Taylor, and a student members, Miss Lucy Williams.

The newly elected members joined the current members in a short meeting to elect officers. First vice president is W. Webster Downer; second V.P. Kenneth A. Ehrman; third V.P., Jascha Veissi; treasurer, Harold H. Apger; recording secretary, Mrs. Cecil Barker.

Gallwey appointed James Glaser as symphony week chairman, and Mrs. Roy Lassetter chairman of program advertising. He called on all board members and association members to promote the symphony concerts in Monterey and Salinas since the Carmel concert series is assured of a sold-out house before the season opens.

A tribute was presented to Ehrman in honor of Cecil Barker, board member, who passed away during his term of office.

Controversy swirls around proposed underwater park for Carmel Bay

By STEVE HAUK

That nearby body of water called Carmel Bay—at times a peaceful and glistening blue jewel, at others a dark and raging menace to those who come within its grasp—is certainly one of Carmel's most valuable natural resources.

People care about it—ask the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors. The board can hardly make a decision without questioning itself or being questioned by others as to the effect the decision will have on the bay.

And it apparently is in need of care, even if that care is belated.

George Fraley (see accompanying story), a longtime skindiver on the Peninsula, says of the bay's sea life, "there's nothing left to speak of."

And Jacques-Yves Cousteau, the famed French underwater explorer who made oceanography a household word through the medium of television, has written William Penn Mott, State Parks and Recreation director, that the bay's ecosystem is "limited in size and thus very vulnerable. In fact, there are preliminary signs of possible degradation. It badly needs protection."

The latest issue concerning Carmel Bay turns on the Point Lobos State Reserve Underwater Reserve Expansion Study, a report that proposes expansion of the reserve "and under water park" from Pebble Beach's Cypress Point south to Yankee Point.

The segment of the report, which was prepared by Charles Mehlert, an assistant superintendent of parks and recreation's Monterey district office, that has stirred the most controversy is that one entitled "Recreation Considerations."

The Carmel City Council, which last August passed a resolution urging the expansion of the reserve to include the bay, earlier this month passed another resolution to the state in which it is "strongly urged to take immediate steps to preserve the natural environment of the Point Lobos Underwater Park and Reserve, including Carmel Bay, and to limit its development of these underwater areas to uses that would not encroach on the primary objective of the conservation of our underwater resources."

The council said it feared the reserve could be turned into a "Coney Island," and Mayor Barney Laiolo said that the report implied the possible use of things such as glass-bottomed boats and mechanized vehicles.

In addition, property owners in Carmel Meadows, Carmel Highlands, the Malpoisa area and Yankee Point have gone on record as opposing any expansion of the present reserve uses.

Saturday, property owner representatives and City Councilmen Ken Brown and Bernard Anderson met in Watsonville with State Senator Donald Grunsky of Watsonville and Assemblyman Bob Wood of Greenfield to ask that the proposed underwater park be preserved just as a reserve not to include recreational uses...

Grunsky and Wood said they would so recommend.

Cousteau, in his letter to Mott, also urges tough restrictions on use of the proposed underwater park: "Any collection of specimen for other than necessary scientific research purposes (even for educational purposes) must be strongly prohibited," he wrote.

Following is the complete text of the "Recreation Considerations" segment of Mehlert's report. Also, there is a letter from Mehlert to Laiolo which is (1) a reply to the mayor on his request for a copy of the report (copies, apparently, are hard to come by), and (2) a defense of the report and proposals in which Mehlert states he was "shocked to read and hear that the proposed underwater park was going to bring in a 'Coney Island' operation."

RECREATION CONSIDERATIONS

Necessity for Project

Over a period of many years the terrestial portion of the State has been explored, studied, researched and identified as to its geographic and plant divisions and sub-divisions. Ample time has been available to set aside the best examples of the California Landscape for the California State Park System.

Such is not the case with the marine environment off California's shore. Until recently virtually nothing was known about our offshore natural resources. In spite of the lack of a general marine inventory of our offshore lands, there has been a great activity in the commercial utilization of these lands without any thought given to the natural resource that was being destroyed. Competition for the off-shore lands is now becoming even greater.

Noticeably absent from the competitive scene are those organizations that work primarily in the public interest. Recreation organizations have a great responsibility to take the lead and to research on their own those areas that have potential for marine recreation. When an area has been found that has outstanding recreational qualities, it must be acquired regardless what may have been acquired previously.

It is on this basis that the expansion of the Point Lobos Marine area is necessary. It is based on the merits of its own superb natural qualities, no other considerations are deemed appropriate. There is not time to wait for a protracted coast line study, evaluation process and eventual selection of the "best examples." The offshore areas suitable for recreation are few and far between. "Underwater parks are where you find them." (Apologies to Mr. Newton B. Drury).

Use Factors

An appreciable portion of this area is being used at the present time by divers from all over the state and even from out of state. The reputation it is getting as an outstanding underwater scenic area is spreading rapdily.

The climate is mild during the entire year. As a result some use of the project area can be made at any time during the year. The one exception of course is during storms that make the water too rough to enter. It has been reported that rain alone will not prevent diving. In fact this condition has a tendency to "flatten out" the water and make diving quite enjoyable. Some of the best visibility has been reported under this condition.

The overall visibility within the project area is considered above average for the California coast. Upwelling is characteristic of this coastal area in the spring and summer bringing the cold, clear, deep water to the surface thus aiding general visibility. Normal underwater visibility is between 30' and 60'. Exceptional visibility, about 5 percent of the time (observed in the vicinity of Bluefish Cove), is between 80' to 100' plus. During periods of phytoplankton bloom (10 to 15 days) visibility is cut to less than 10 feet.

There are no unusual natural or man made hazards within the project area. Since a portion of the area is open coast, one should always show a healthy respect for the sea. Currents and surge are nearly always present. There have been occasional sightings of shark.

The natural features of the project area have attracted a variety of uses. The following are the main ones:

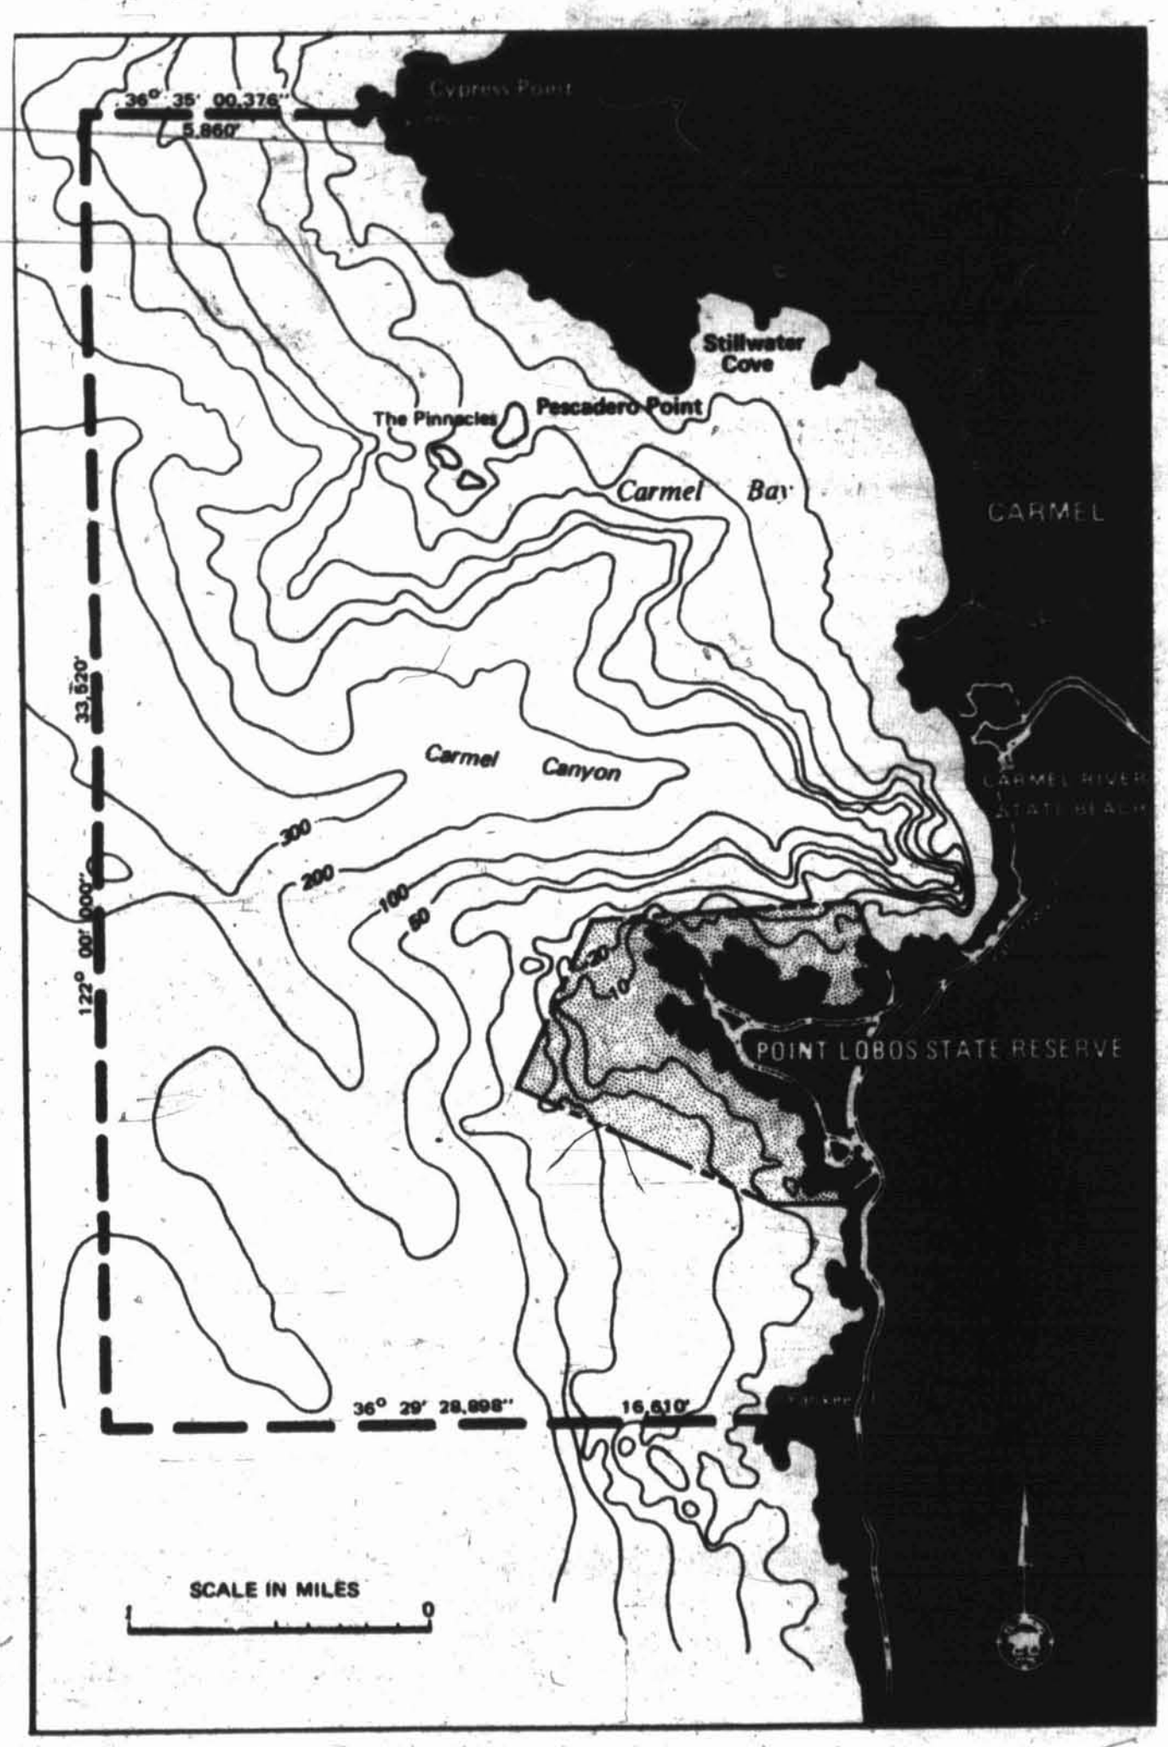
Public Education - Tide pool and sub-littoral field trips.

Scientific Research - Various educational institutions and organizations are conducting continuously, long range research in the project area. Notably: Hopkins Marine Station, University of California at Berkeley, Beta Research Group, and the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

Underwater Photography - The good visibility and excellent marine life makes this area the virtual mecca for the serious underwater photographer.

Exploration - The underwater labyrinth formed by the unique geology of the project area makes this form of recreation one of the most popular. This activity invariably leads into underwater photography.

Spearfishing - This activity attracts many enthusiasts also. The number and variety of fish that can be taken makes this a favorite spot to visit. State and National spearfishing meets have been held in the project ara.



THESE ARE the boundaries for a proposed marine reserve and underwater park in a study made by Charles Mehlert of State Parks and Recreation. The reserve would include all of Carmel Bay.

MEHLERT'S LETTER:

Dear Mayor Laiolo:

Your request for the brochure of the proposed underwater park in Carmel was sent to Sacramento. That publication is out of print and will be reprinted in a few weeks.

The reply to your letter has been delayed too long as it is and I will answer your questions now and send the brochure when they again become available.

We in the District office in Monterey were shocked to read and hear that the proposed underwater park was going to bring in a "Coney Island" operation. As I recall, Don Medina, Chairman of the Underwater Advisory Board; Don Rich, chief ranger at Point Lobos Reserve; and I met with you and explained our goals for setting aside this underwater area as a part of the State Park System.

The intent then and now is to protect, preserve, and allow only non detrimental uses such as: underwater photography, underwater exploration, swimming and scientific projects sponsored by responsible organizations under special permit. This is exactly what we have been doing at the Point Lobos underwater park since 1960. The scientific community has noted no deterioration and has commended us on our efforts in protecting that marine environment.

There will be no uses incompatible with the aims that we discussed with you. There will be no mechanical vehicles on the beaches. We prohibit this type of activity on all our beaches and enforce it within the capability of our staff.

We feel it is important that a beneficial public use like an underwater park be established in this area. There is a strong possibility that such a use would tend to keep out such things as oil drilling. The State Lands Commission has jurisdiction over such matters and issues the permits. The threat of a public outcry should drilling be permitted could very well influence their decision.

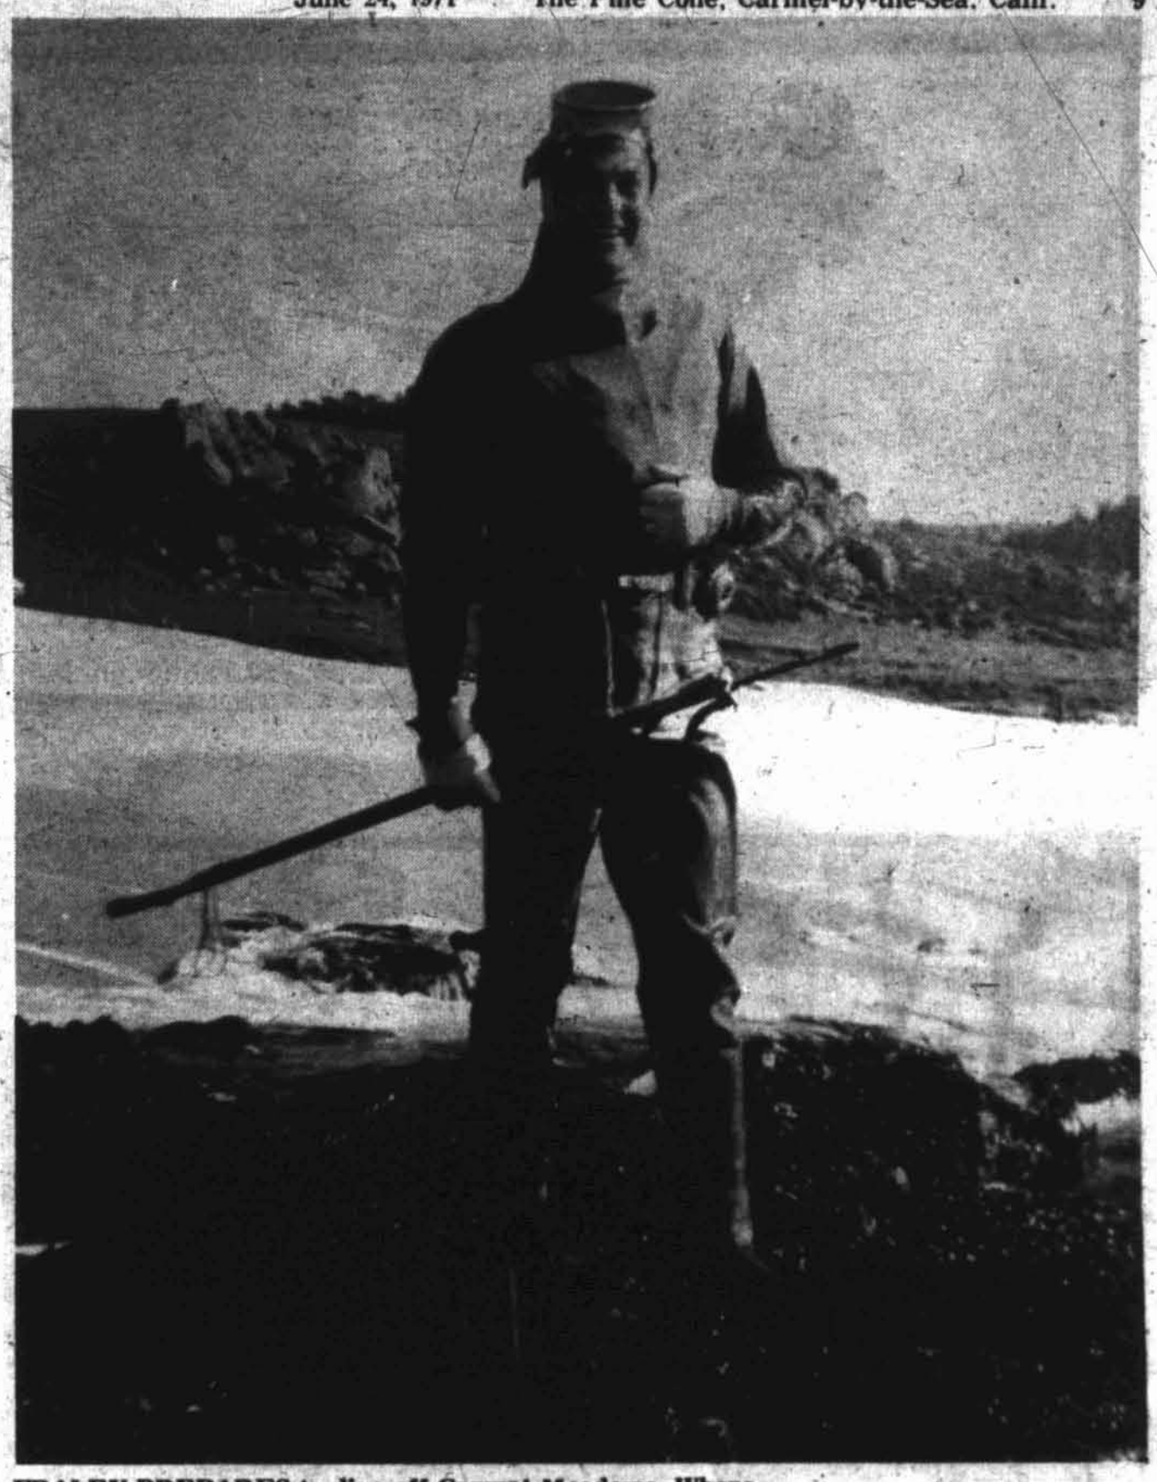
We also feel that we can work with the State Fish and Game Commission in regulating spear fishing in the area. We have been successful so far in deemphasizing spear fishing off Carmel River State Beach. This accomplishment is noteworthy in that spear fishing is not under State Park jurisdiction. The diving clubs have voluntarily cooperated with us in limiting the catch in various ways.

It is our feeling that through the cooperation of the visitors and a friendly community that we will have the same success in administering the proposed underwater park as we have had administering our underwater area at Point Lobos.

I hope I have made our intentions clear regarding this matter. If you have other questions I will be happy to answer them. A copy of the Point Lobos Expansion Study will be sent as soon as I receive it.

Sincerely,
CHARLES MEHLERT
Assistant Superintendent

IN 1953 FRALEY speared this six-foot wolf eel in Carmel Bay. They are still prevalent in the bay, says Fraley, who adds that their danger is "greatly exaggerated. They're not aggressive at all."



FRALEY PREPARES to dive off Carmel Meadows. Where there was open space there are now houses. Where there was an "abundance" of sea life, "there's nothing left to speak of."

Marine life depleted in Carmel Bay:

'Whenever man invades an area . . . it goes to hell'

By STEVE HAUK

"Whenever man invades an area, no matter how it's controlled, it goes to hell," says George Fraley.

The area here being discussed is Carmel Bay which is being considered as an underwater reserve or recreation area, depending on who's doing the talking.

Fraley makes no bones about it that he has been one of the bay's invaders—a bay which at one time he said held an abundance of sea life but "now there's nothing left to speak of"—and is in part responsible for its present state.

A tall, athletic man of 48 with a thick gray mane of hair, Fraley is one of the Monterey Peninsula's skin-diving pioneers, one of the first to explore the waters of Carmel and Monterey bays.

His uncle, Edward Bushnell, installed the fish hoppers and underwater hoses for all 16 canneries on Monterey's Cannery Row, and Fraley, who would assist him, made his first dive at age 14.

When Fraley joined the Navy, he became a Seabees diver. Following his discharge, he came back to the Peninsula and spear-fished and explored the waters of both bays and south to Yankee Point.

With divers Frank Ambrosio, Roy Hattori and Earl Stanley, Fraley formed the Monterey Peninsula Sea Otters, the second oldest skindiving club in the United States.

Fraley dove on a commercial basis for many years and, he says, "Pollution's always been around. The water off Cannery Row was bad for years. A lot of this has been brought to the attention of the public because of the ecology kick, but the waters have been polluted for many years."

In the 1950s in Carmel Bay, Fraley said, there was "lots of sea life, lots of abalone, lots of fish, and an abundance of sea urchins. Now there's nothing to speak of."

As to the depletion of sea life in Carmel Bay, Fraley says much if not most of it can be blamed on divers and sea otters.

"What the sewage has done, I don't know. I'm not qualified to say. All I can say is it's not like it used to be, that I'm sure of."

In 1950, when abalone in Carmel Bay were "abundant, it was unbelievable.

"The finest abalones any commercial man had ever seen," Fraley said. "The meat was white and the shells were deep and now there's nothing there."

Two years ago Fraley and a number of other experienced divers dove off San Jose Beach to make an abalone survey. All they found were "four abalone in a narrow crevice where the otters or man cannot get to them."

In the early 1950s, an abalone meant a dollar to a commercial diver and the take was great, Fraley said. In addition, in 1954 and '55 the otters moved north into the bay and Fraley and other divers "noticed tremendous piles of shells on the bottom of the bay."

The divers at this time were using snorkels, but then aqua lungs, followed by rubber suits, came into use, resulting in more divers.

Before aqua lungs, Fraley says, a diver could swim right into a school of fish without scaring them, but with the improved equipment and more divers fish became "spooked."

Whereas Fraley and the Peninsula Sea Otters had to dive with very little protection from the cold and could stay down only short periods of time, the rubber suits and aqua lungs, he says, allowed those not as hardy to participate in the sport and resulted in a numerical explosion.

He refers to the suits and lungs as "the downfall of the fish population and abalone" because they gave the hunter an unfair advantage.

After talking with divers from Los Angeles to Northern California, Fraley thinks sea life is "pretty well depleted all up and down the coast.

"You don't find the species you found before."

No longer in Carmel Bay do you find the ling cod, cabazoni and smelt runs "like you used to have."

"I quit sport diving in 1960 and it was shot then as far as I was concerned, and that was 11 years ago."

Since then Fraley has made just exploratory dives and "all observations since then show it to be pretty dormant."

While he says "all of us are guilty of taking over the limit. All of us had our share of blundering," Fraley adds that divers are "not a bunch of rogues."

The majority of divers are conservation minded, he says, adding that the Peninsula Sea Otters, a group no longer functioning, was responsible for forming the Central California Council of Diving Clubs "which led to other conservation groups in diving in the mid-50s."

"In all my years of diving I have never been stopped by a fish and game warden. What does this tell you?" Fraley asks.

He quickly answers his own question:

"If we want to preserve what we have we should do more policing. We need more money, more men."

And, he intimates, more honesty, a willingness to face up to the problem. Although it was little more than a year ago that Monterey beaches, along with others around the Peninsula, were posted as unsafe for swimming, Fraley says that when he was diving commercially in the 1950s "the water did not meet bathing standards in Monterey then."

Fraley, who makes his home in Monterey Peninsula Country Club with his pretty wife, Sylvia, a Carmel High School graduate, and their eight-year-old son, Royce, who is already learning to dive, owned the Del Conte Diving Co. in Monterey four years ago. He changed businesses, though, and now owns George Hairstyling, for men and women, at Fifth and Mission in Carmel.

Asked how a man goes from diving to hairstyling, he laughs and replies:

"Survival."

Then, a little more somberly, he adds that commercial diving has come to its end.

"Basically, it is man's greed," he says, explaining the depletion of sea life, "his shortsightedness. I'm as guilty as the others."

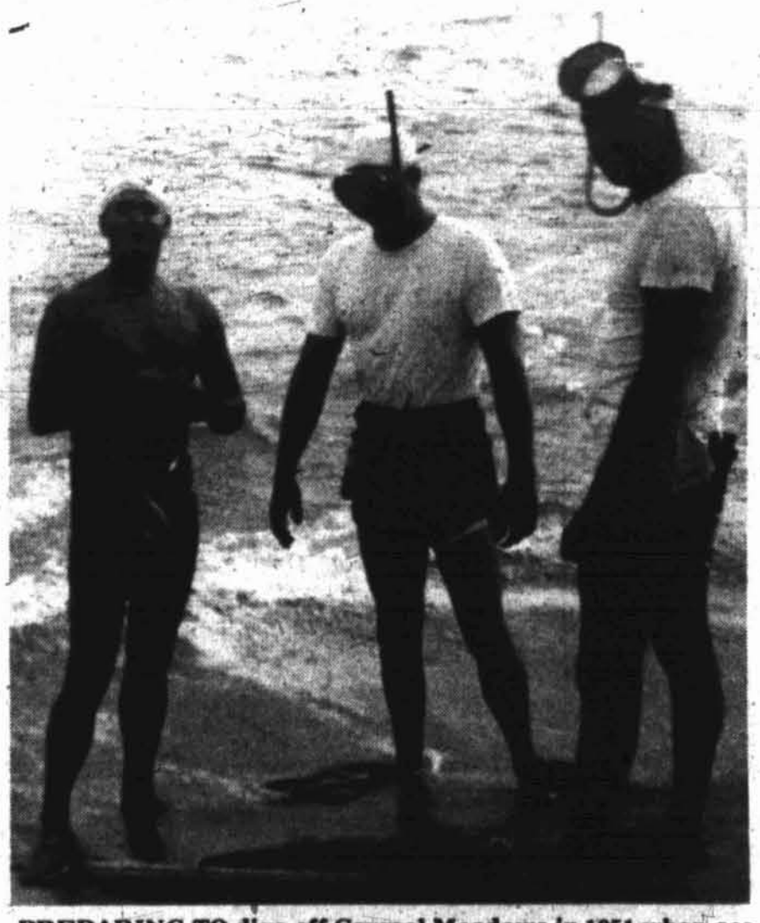
While he thinks there should be "specific areas for spear fishing," he says of Carmel Bay:

"I think they should limit diving to photography, exploration, those in the study of marine biology."

Fraley describes the exploration of virgin waters as "the greatest thrill. Something I'll always remember."

He glances at Mrs. Fraley and adds quickly, "Besides my lovely wife here.

"To go into an area and realize you are the first human to gaze on a particular rock or sea plant—it was truly a great thing."



PREPARING TO dive off Carmel Meadows in 1951 when sea life was still plentiful in Carmel Bay are, left, Earl Stanley, Fraley and Robert Shaw, now a county deputy coroner. Before going in early in the morning, Fraley says, the divers would start a fire on the beach. Coming out of the water the divers huddled around the fire and drank wine before their next dive. In fact, while they were diving they hung a bottle of wine on the pictured inner tube—"for medicinal purposes only," quips Fraley.

Four bills on coastal controls before Senate

Public testimony will be received on four bills to control land use along the California coast at a special hearing called by the Senate Committee on Natural Resources and Wildlife on Monday at 1:30 p.m. in room 4203 of the State Capitol in Sacramento.

The measures under consideration are SB 1354 (Wedworth), SB 1483 (Grunsky), SB 1555 (Alquist), and SB 1619 (Dills). Assembly bills on the same subject which pass the Assembly will also be referred to the Senate committee.

Sen. John A. Nejedly, committee chairman, is asking interested persons who live in coastal areas to testify on the bills and say which features are workable and which, from their viewpoint, would be inappropriate.

The committee is particularly seeking comments on the following:

1—The form of new state and local organizations proposed by the bills; their make-up and ability to deal effectively with land use issues in the coastal zone.

2—The preparation of a state plan for coastal zone conservation and development; the selection of planning objectives, responsibility for initiating the elements of the plan, final adoption of the plan.

3—Land use development control during the planning process; at what level or levels of government should proposals be reviewed and how should their acceptability be determined.

4—Particular objections to any of the bills referred to.

Senator Nejedly underscored the Committee's desire for a succinct appraisal of how the various bills would affect the program with which each organization or community is presently most concerned.

The Contra Costa County Republican indicated that final action on the bills would not be taken at the June 28 meeting.

INETEEN OF the 22 children in Paula Boys' second grade ss at River School found their last two days of school this r more enjoyable than most students would. LEARNING HOW to row can be a difficult business as Michelle Michaud and Matt Cropley learn. Many of the children's parents accompanied them on the campout.

Camping out 'brings kids together' --in more ways than one

Camping out can be a lot of fun for a kid, but maybe the nighttime takes a little getting used to.

You know. It gets pretty dark. Those trees so friendly in the sunlight take on sort of weird shapes. And that hooting owl doesn't sound like a hooting owl anymore - he sounds like something else.

When the second grade River School class of Paula Boys recently camped out at Riverside Campground in Big Sur, Mrs. Boys noticed a peculiar development.

When the kids first set up camp -- during the daylight hours -- they spread their sleeping bags over a large area. But when night fell, those own little campsites drew up into a tight little separate circle. They were not much scared of the dark and

OUR COASTAL AREAS DESPERATELY NEED PROTECTION

Assembly Bill 1471 is recommended by the Sierra Club and League of Women Voters as the strongest of several coastal conservation bills now pending in the State Legislature. Development on coastal properties near Carmel and Monterey might be affected if AB 1471 were passed promptly. However, opposition from the oil companies, public utilities, land developers and League of California Cities is gaining momentum, and your help is needed to offset their lobbying efforts. The way to help is to contact Assemblyman Wood and State Senator Grunsky.

Don't forget to attend the lecture and slide show on conservation of the California coast by planning consultant Louis B. Muhly at Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall, Thursday June 24 at 7:30 p.m. He is an outstanding speaker. The program is sponsored by the Sierra Club, Audubon Society, A.A.U.W. and League of Women Voters and is well worth your time and attention.

The conscience of Carmel:

Freeway foolishness

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

IN THE LAST WEEK OR SO, a daily paper which circulates in the Carmel area has been reporting and editorializing upon what is called the Hatton Canyon freeway.

Many, many years ago the people of the Carmel area said, again and again, that they did not want any freeway at all in their environs. And the Carmel City Council made the point emphatic in July 1966, when it said in a unanimous resolution directed to the State Legislature that it wanted "freeway" designation forever removed from whatever sort of highway the state would sometime decide to construct through the Carmel area.

Not only did the Carmel City Council act (in its resolution No. 2359) but the Monterey City Council also passed a resolution to support the Carmel request. Each of these resolutions requested the state legislature to stop freeway construction at precisely the point it had then reached—"200 feet south of the Pacific Grove-Pebble Beach interchange." But the state legislature did not act then, nor has it since that time.

And so—whenever the State Dvision of Highways decides to start tearing up the Hatton Canyon, or the present State Highway 1 (opposite Carmel), or both—it will be a freeway that will be built...unless, of course, the local governments, the county of Monterey, or citizen groups, are able to convince the legislature that authority to build a "freeway" here, should be finally and definitively terminated before it can be used.

Here, if you've been folloiwng the Hatton Canyon roadway discussion through the years, you may interpose a question: Isn't it going to be a "scenic highway"—and not a freeway—which, some day, will be built in the Hatton Canyon?

YOU'RE BOTH right and wrong. State Highway 1, as far as the intersection with the Salinas highway over in Monterey, is indeed a part of the state's scenic highway system. But, at the same time, it's also—and it has been, for many, many years—a part of the state's freeway system as well.

But, you persist, how can that be? Isn't a road either a "scenic highway" or a "freeway?" Aren't those particular sheep and goats, actually separated in the state law?

That's just the trouble. They aren't separated—and they won't be separated unless—and until—the legislature actually acts to terminate freeway status from whatever expanded roadway system is to be built to replace the present state highway 1.

How, you ask, can that be?

The whole thing is governed by what legislatures, in years past, have put into the state's Streets and Highways Code.

One section of that Code (Section 253.2) says that a "freeway" will, someday, be built from the south boundary of San Francisco to "Carmel." Another section (Section 263.2) says state highway 1 from the San Luis Obispo county line northward to the intersection with route 68 (the Salinas highway) is to be a "scenic highway."

So, you ask, just what kind of double talk is that?

IT SIMPLY MEANS that a usual fanatic 65-mile-per-hour "freeway"—with limited access and huge concrete interchange structures both at Carpenter Street and at the entrance to the Carmel Valley—will someday be built—unless, in the meantime, the right to build any kind of freeway at all is actually terminated by the State Legislature.

The "scenic highway" designation for that same "freeway" segment simply means that the State Division of Highways, when it gets around to driving that concrete monolith through the Hatton Canyon (with monster interchanges at both ends), will do some special landscaping to try to hide some of the worst scars which the "freeway" construction will entail.

But, you ask, didn't we just read in a report of something the Monterey Chamber of Commerce was stewing over, that the roadway—or "freeway"—would be built—all four lanes of it, from the Carmel River to Carmel High School—along present state highway 1?

When I read this, I phoned the district office of the State Division of Highways (located in San Luis Obispo), and talked with Henry Case, programs and budgets engineer, who said that there are no plans to construct the proposed "freeway" along present highway 1, but instead—and only—through Hatton Canyon. (He pointed out, however, that the likely time for that construction is still some years away—after 1979, in fact).

It was Case who pointed out that—because of the "scenic highway" designation through Carmel, which we've already mentioned, there will be "special landscaping". done, through the Hatton Canyon, whenever that "freeway" is built. (There is an estimated five million dollar price tag on the proposed Hatton Canyon freeway, and the Division of Highways now doesn't expect to have money available for it until after 1979).

MEANWHILE, THEREFORE, there is still time for the city councils of Carmel and Monterey to urge the State Legilsature to get that frightening "freeway" designation for whatever highway is someday to be built through the Carmel area, out of the State Streets and Highways Code. (People locally, particularly the members of the Carmel Citizens' Committee, have repeatedly urged simply that a meandering reduced-speed roadway be built in the bottom of the Hatton Canyon, thus escaping the usual scarring of the environment which is so characteristic of freeway construction throughout California).

Meanwhile, however, seemingly in an unaware moment last summer, the Carmel City Council urged the State Division of Highways to "expedite construction of the Hatton Canyon Scenic Highway" without even mentioning the fact that this proposed highway was still—and is still—in the state's projected "freeway" system. And without mentioning either, that unanimously passed Carmel City Council Resolution No. 2359 of July 13, 1966, which demanded that freeway authority for any future highway construction southward, be specifically terminated "two hundred feet south of the Pacific Grove-Pebble Beach Interchange."

Here you might wonder just why I keep talking about the place, on Carmel Hill, where the existing freeway construction stopped some years ago. But there's a good reason—even though, at the same time, a rather foolish one as well.

THE LAW IS FULL of definitions, as you may have noticed if you've had anything to do with what are called the various state "codes" which specify just what is, or isn't, to be done under a variety of circumstances and in a variety of directions, throughout the state.

Sometimes, however, a certain state code, in a certain context, fails to define its terms. Thus, in the Streets & Highways Code, to which I have already referred, it says that a freeway will some day be built from San Francisco to "Carmel" without defining "Carmel."

To remedy this failure in definition—because actually no part of state highway 1 passes through the existing City of Carmel—somebody in the State Department of Public Works or in the State Division of Highways, decided that Carmel was "a point along state highway 1, two-tenths of a mile south of the Carmel River." This, amazingly enough, put the "Carmel" the Division of Highways recognizes, right in the middle of the Odello artichoke fields, about which so much controversy is presently raging.

IT IS TO REPLACE this obviously incorrect definition of Carmel, that the Carmel City Council and the Monterey City Council, back in 1966, simply sought to substitute for freeway purposes, that "two hundred feet south of the present Pacific Grove-Pebble Beach Interchange" would be a quite sufficient, and a quite satisfactory alternative definition of "Carmel"—a definition upon which, up to now, the State Legislature hasn't acted, but definitely should.

Here, again—as in so many other contexts—the City of Carmel is without any actual jurisdiction as far as control of state highways building in what's called the Carmel area because the territory involved, is outside city limits.

Even under the best of circumstances, cities and counties have too little actual say in what is, or isn't, to be done highway-wise in their respective jurisdictions. But even that little bit, Carmel doesn't have with regard to state highway 1, just because it's outside city limits.

The controlling document locally, was approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, May 6, 1957, when that Board declared "...certain sections of State Highway...in the County of Monterey between two-tenths of a mile south of the Carmel River and Monterey, to be a freeway..."

BECAUSE THE FINAL PARAGRAPH in this document says "this agreement may be modified at any time by the mutual written consent of the parties hereto..."—even though the escape possibilities are small—I have, again and again, through the years, urged the board of supervisors to reopen, and try to change, the document's language, but the board has, so far, chosen not to "reopen" it.

If you feel a special fondness for the wooded canyon you see on the right as you start to round the curve on highway 1 going toward the Carpenter Street intersection, and if you would hate to see it ever desecrated, particularly for foolish freeway purposes, let your Carmel or Monterey City Councilmen know, and also let Willard Branson, your county supervisor, know. For it is still not too late for city and county officials to insist upon the change in "freeway" language in the Streets & Highway Code, which we've been talking about, and which could still save that wooded Hatton Canyon for posterity.

The music corner

BY IRVING W. GREENBERG, Ph.D.

A RECORDING released recently by Crystal Record Co. in Los Angeles is of particular interest to music lovers here because of the involvement of the pianist, who is also and has been very active with the Carmel Bach Festival for the last 33 years, and is now here for the thirty-fourth season as the general coordinator of the Festival. The artist is Ralph Linsley, in the Grieg Sonata for Cello and Piano in A minor. The cello soloist is Gilbert Reese, also known to audiences here because of his performances at Monterey Peninsula College.

This sonata is in the usual three movements -- allegro agitato, andante molto tranquillo, and allegro molto e marcato. It reflects the nostalgia and occupation of Grieg with Norway and its rugged imagery. The melancholy and sombre colors of this work have been beautifully brought out by these two artists, particularly in the slow second movement. The two outer movements, which contain the main thematic material, reflect modulations and dance forms the interplay between the piano and the cello. Mr. Linsley's sensitivity makes this a very important release. It is marked as Stereo S 134 by the recording company.

He comes here from the Sheraton Inn at Ithaca, N.Y. He has played numerous other resorts in the east, and has made concert tours there as well as in Germany.

Rose has also performed with The Travellers, a folksinging group, and has also performed such major works as the Requiem by Brahms and the Passing According to St. John by Bach.

He started his singing career in high school and continued it at Cornell University, where he was featured with the University Glee Club.

Wherever you go in England, you soon realize there is much to enjoy—the landscape is never monotonous. The fields are always fresh, the air moist, and in summer, the beautiful green of the grass, hedges, trees, makes one realize why the island is likened to a park.
Traveling through this lovely country, you are reminded of the similarity between English scenery and English character—the best of both are hidden away; to find them out you must take time. Even the children, if they don't know you, give polite, chilly answers when you ask directions. But take a few moments, admire their village, say "you have a cousin at Eton, your sister married a Londoner," or some similar tie-in, and suddenly you're no longer a "tripper;" you've changed to an acquaintance at least, and have become worthy of being directed to some of the delightful spots you would never find on your own.
We also have a little place set aside for your enjoyment, hidden away at "The Top of the Hill." . . . Why don't we meet for lunch some day soon?

GATHERED AROUND Sherry Steffens, who plays the sultry Hedy La Rue in "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying," are Betty Hughes, Cheryl-Ann Cox, Scott Wood, Judy Lozen, Buz Childers, J.C. Hale, John Sullivan, Karen Bevelander, Pete Hanson, Susan Claypool and Mark Thompson, who find it hard to believe that a former hat check girl is about to join the office staff of the World Wide Wicket Company. The Pulitzer Prize musical comedy that ran 3½ years on Broadway plays nightly except Monday and Tuesday at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant.

'La Mancha' reopens to a standing ovation

That stirring and inspirational — as well as highly entertaining -- musical "Man of La Mancha" opened a second run at the Circle Theatre last weekend.

Playing as it did to packed houses earlier in the year, there is every reason to believe that it's summer run will be just as successful.

A bravado performance by Robert E. Amos as Don Quixote (and Cervantes) make of this memorable musical an intoxicating experience.

Amos has a deep feeling for a most complex role, and together with a splendid voice and superb interpretation gives both depth and breadth to the entire performance.

All of the action takes place in a dungeon in Seville at the time of the Spanish inquisition late in the 16th Century. A play within a play, the story unfolds with tremendous impact, telling as it does of man's blackest cruelty as well as his greatest glory, as expressed by the towering faith of a bedeviled Don Quixote.

Others in the cast rise to tremendous heights in their challenging roles. Joyce Malikoff is stunning as Dulcinea, Dick Bird beautiful as Sancho Panza, Richard Mannheim imperious as the Duke, Roy Baxter superbly cunning as the Innkeeper (and the governor), Jerry Van Steenbergen believably cruel as the Captain of the Inquisition, Stephen Keener excellent as the Padre, and on down the cast, which also includes impressive performances by Ann Urice, Gloria Barron, Bob Barron, Barbara Conklin, Terrence Wadsworth, Frank Pucillo, Steve Thorngate, Steve Thues, Larry Venza, Kevin Skiles, Mark Hagensick and George F. Ennis.

The music, if possible, is even better than in the first run, and lent an additional dimension to the stirring drama, and was provided by Emma Sue Amos, pianist and music director, Barbara Buswell and Liz Todd, flute and piccolo, John King, bass, Glenn DeGruy, Richard Conklin, Eileen Young and Stuart Campbell, guitars.

Climaxed at the end of each of the two acts by "The Quest - The Impossible Dream", undoubtedly one of the most inspirational songs ever written, Man of La Mancha as it is presented by Carmel's Community Theater is an unforgettable experience.

Michael Keller, who staged and directed the show, has brought to it a remarkable intensity of understanding, and impressively proves that a great arena is not necessary to the majestic performance of a play whose lyrics, music, dialog and staging are superbly understood and projected. Mr. Keller is a genius. The standing ovation accorded the cast at the opening Friday evening spoke eloquently of this fact.

Man of La Mancha plays weekends at the Circle Theatre on Casanova Street for another month. It is theatre at is best -- even compared to the professional stage. GMD

Carmel city council pledges $50,000 to OLAF

Shortly after the Odello Land Acqusition Fund (OLAF) announced Monday that it had passed the $200,000 mark, the Carmel City Council, unaware of the announcement, pledged $50,000 to the fund.

Councilmen at the special adjourned meeting Monday afternoon thought the pledge would draw the fund closer to the $250,000 good faith guarantee required by Bruno and Emilio Odello before they would enter into talks concerning the purchase of the ranch at the mouth of the Carmel Valley.

The city council was unaware that its pledge of greenbelt funds would allow OLAF to meet or surpass its goal.

The Pine Cone contacted Bruno Odello and Fred Farr, OLAF chairman, after the city council decision.

Odello said that "if they've (OLAF) got $250,000 cash in the bank, we'll sit down and honor the committments made at the planning commission level last April."

"If we get something going, okay," he said, but otherwise he and his brother would continue in the same vein as other property owners in the vicinity have in the past, and that is to obtain a "fair exchange on our property."

He also added that it was "too bad" that some bitterness has developed because of "political ambitions" of some of those involved in trying to preserve the property as open space.

"On behalf of OLAF" Farr said, "we are extremely gratified to receive the support of the city council of Carmel."

He added, however, that the fund drive will continue, and that the goal is now to match the $50,000 pledged by the city by July 1, the deadline set by the Odellos for the $250,000 guarantee.

"We would like to get it all from subscription support," he said.

Monday, in asking the council to make the pledge, Mayor Barney Laiolo said that "a lot of people are holding out" their contributions to OLAF because the city had not yet "pledged its support."

"I think, that in making a pledge of this sort," Councilman Eben Whittlesey said, "we have to put a definite time limit on our pledge and definite conditions."

Whittlesey pointed out that the city in a past resolution had pledged its support to help purchase the Odello property on the west side of Highway 1, the larger portion, not the entire ranch.

Laiolo agreed. "Some people have the idea that it's for the entire piece, and that's not necessarily the case."

Whittlesey added, however, that he thought the city would be open to the purchase of all of the Odello property.

The resolution passed by the council states that the city pledges $50,000 from the uncommitted portion of the greenbelt reserve (greenbelt revenues are acquired through the city's hotel and motel tax) toward the purchase of the Odello property on the west side of the highway contingent upon certain conditions:

1—That negotiations with the Odellos be undertaken as soon as $250,000 is pledged, including the city pledge (which appears to be the case right now);

2—That the city's pledge would be withdrawn unless other pledges and payments, plus the city's, total $250,000 by July 1 (seemingly a moot point now);

3—That a representative of the city will be a member of the committee to negotiate with the Odellos regarding the purchase of the land.

4—That the city's obligation under the pledge will terminate, unless otherwise extended by the council, on or before the Sept. 8 council meeting.

5—That the land, if purchased, be under public ownership.

Concerning the fourth condition, City Administrator Hugh Bayless said it was a safeguard to prevent the city from losing the $50,000 if a deal isn't consummated for the land. If by Sept. 8 OLAF and the Odellos seem close to agreement, Bayless said the city would probably extend the time limit on the pledge.

Heart Association elects officers

The Central Mission Trails Heart Association held its seventh annual meeting on June 15 at La Playa Hotel in Carmel.

On the agenda for the evening was the election of officers for the coming year. Elected were:

Anthony Calciano, M.D. of Santa Cruz, president; William D. Curtis, Monterey, re-elected chairman of the board; Ernest G. Hanowell, M.D., Salinas, president-elect; Earl J. Kolb, Pacific Grove, vice-president; Larry Stewart, Hollister, re-elected vice-president; Mrs. Amelia Romeo, Santa Cruz, secretary; and Charles F. Ziert; Salinas, re-elected treasurer.

New officers will assume responsibility on July 1.

At the dinner meeting, members heard talks by Herbert Bauer, M.D. of Woodland and S. Leonard Syme, Ph. D. of Berkeley on future directions of heart disease control programs.

Village planners sour on plans for Carmel Rancho Phase III

The village's planners don't think much of a planned buffer zone to the final phase of the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center.

The plans for Phase III of the development were presented at last week's study session of the planning commission.

The area is considered in Carmel's sphere of influence and the planners can make recommendations to the County Planning Commission which will act on the application June 30.

The commission's letter to the county will express displeasure with a three-acre buffer zone, asking for more landscaping and less parking area.

Harry Bell presented the plans for George Bestor and Associates, Carmel Rancho Incorporated engineers.

The plans include the development of 10 acres south of the present shopping center and west of Carmel Rancho Boulevard which is zoned for commercial development plus a three-acre parcel which is zoned R-3 (allowing hotel, motel or apartment development) which Bell said would act as a buffer zone.

Bell told the commissioners that the 10-acre commercial development would be the final phase of the shopping center and that although the law allows 25 percent ground coverage, Carmel Rancho is asking just 19 percent.

He said the under-allowable coverage was decided upon because Carmel Rancho felt "we should be easing up and soften the commercial approach" by spreading the buildings.

He said the three-acre buffer zone would be "a cross parking and landscaping area."

"We want to have some kind of graceful and effective termination of the shopping center," he said.

Commissioner Dorothea Roberts, who said of the shopping center as it presently stands, "There's no planting down there," said that what Bell was calling a buffer zone was really a parking area.

Mrs. Roberts said there should be enough parking within the 10-acre development and that further paving shouldn't be needed.

"Why not plant it?" she said of the three-acre buffer zone.

Commissioner Fred Keeble said that it should be communicated to the county planners that no parking should be allowed in the R-3 buffer zone. He said it was "just an extension of parking for the commercial into the residential" zone and "I object to it."

"I've said many times," Chairman Olaf Dahlstrand said, "that we were being eaten up by pavement, and this is another instance of it."

On the 10 acres of commercially zoned property, the preliminary map shows seven building "blocks". Three of these blocks would be single buildings with 6000 to 6500 square feet.

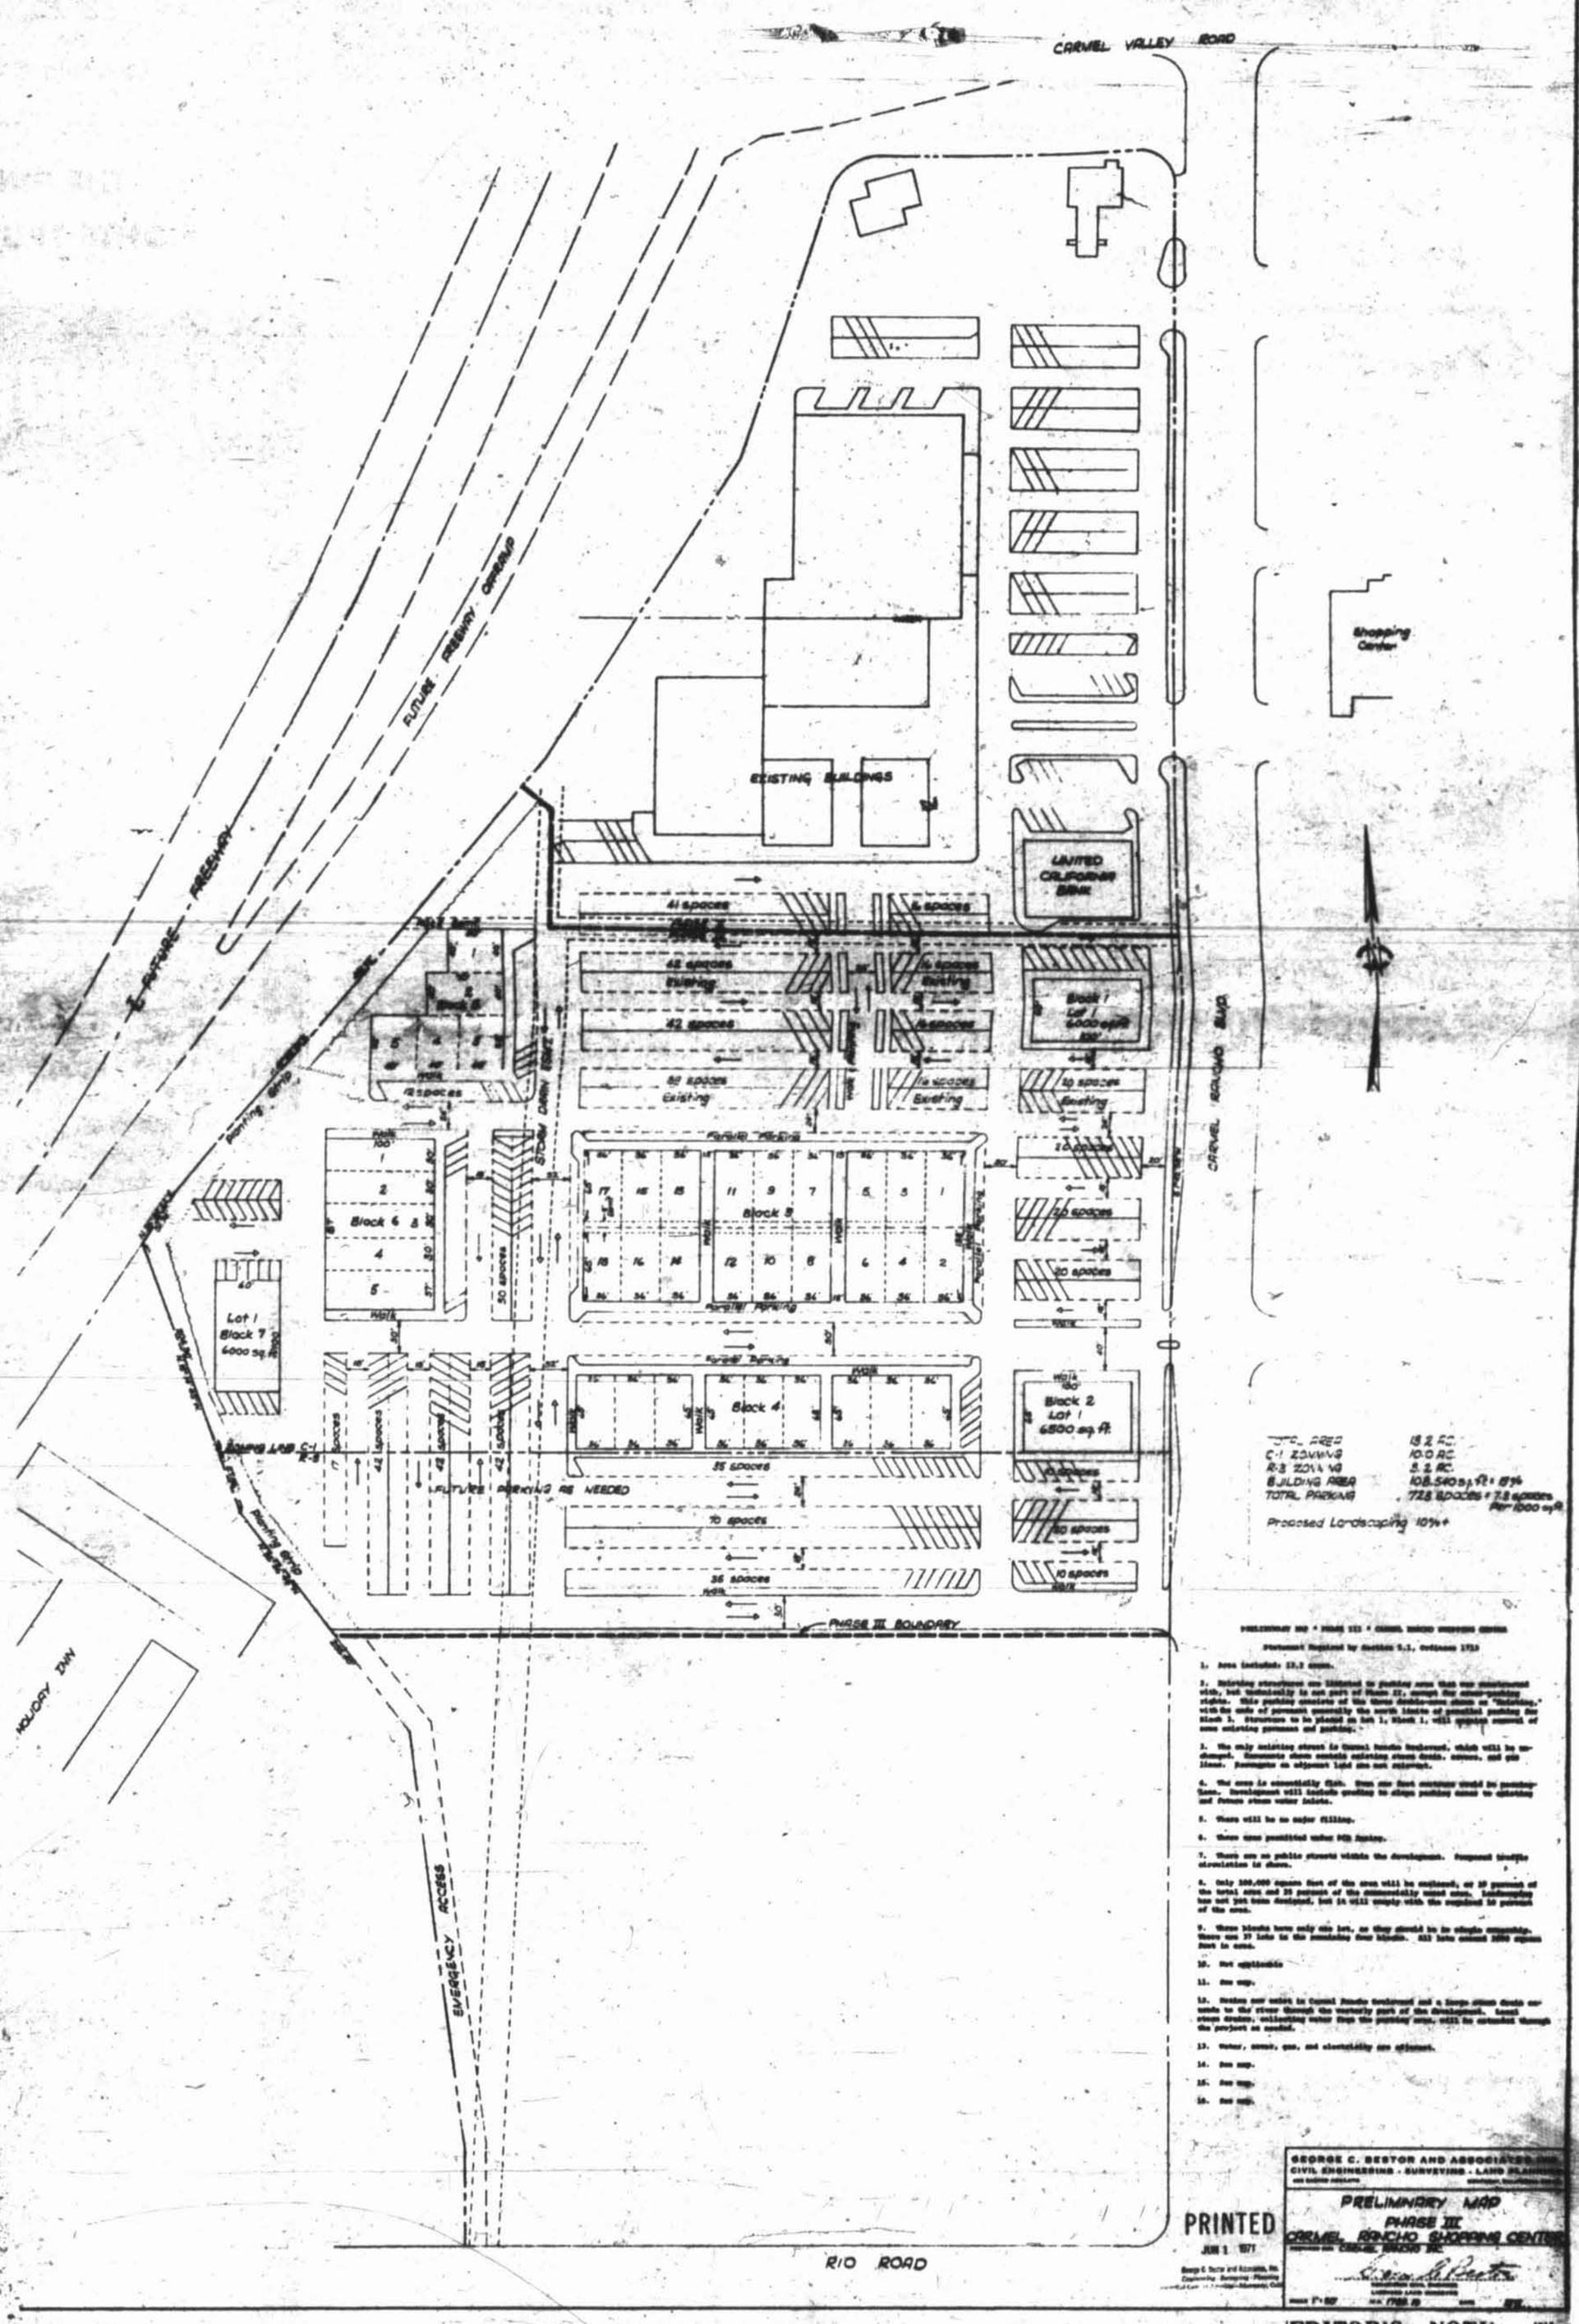
The remaining four blocks are shown divided among several smaller stores, with the largest containing 18 units, another 9 units and two with five units each.

Most of the perimeter of the development would be given over to parking, with a total of 723 spaces provided. No landscaping is shown on the map, but Carl Hooper of Bestor & Associates said last week that the project will meet the minimum requirement of 10 percent of the land used for landscaping.

Hooper said the theory behind Phase III is to create "a little Ocean Avenue" in theheartof the development, with many small stores of varying design. While the stores would have to be compatible in appearance, Hooper said, they would definitely break out of the familiar uniform pattern found at most shopping centers.

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II



THE HEAVY broken lines indicate the borders of the final construction phase of Carmel Rancho Shopping Center at the mouth of the valley. The 13.2 acre development includes 10 acres immediately adjacent to the present shopping center complex which will be developed into seven building "blocks." The remaining 3.2 acres (marked "Future parking as needed") will be developed into a "buffer" zone. The Carmel Planning Commission thinks the "buffer" zone will just be more paving for parking and has expressed its displeasure to the county.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The "freeway" and "off ramp" indicated at left of site plan was inserted by architects; no plans have been approved for such a roadway.

PARTY PLANS . . .

BY PHYLLIS JERVEY

WHEN DRU DUNN moved her "in-and-out" Keeping Room luncheon and tea rendezvous from Carmel Valley to Carmel was she really pleased with her choice? Not that this artistic, inventive restauranteuse par excellence wasn't happy in the Valley...it is that she is happier right here in Carmel.

Dru, who has a lucky star, also found the ideal house on our tree topped upper trail with glassed-in terrace. In this refreshing setting, which never seems to turn really dark, it is more like a Japanese etching awash with mist. The pines are inspiring, the fog so refreshing that Dru's energies are revived for dawn's tasks.

With amazing originality, plus a practical sense of fitness, Dru has just recently opened what she cleverly refers to as a gourmet "Picnic Place." Small round tables, with fuschia trees growing under skylights, are bright with color, giving this hospitable new style "Keeping Room" yet another dimension.

In Colonial days a keeping room was where the whole family gathered, different from today's "wreck" or junior family spot. In those good times, there was always an iron pot redolent with simmering beef and home grown vegetables.) Individual loaves of home baked bread (which tradition Dru continues daily), and tantalizing jams and jellies, all made from fresh Peninsula fruits.

An orange-colored old stove, the first to ever be converted into gas in the U.S.A., dominates this delightfully aromatic Carmel meeting place. On this fascinating stove with its heart-warming reminder of wood burning fuel and consequent charcoal, Dru has gem-like containers with hand-torn pieces of crisp baked bread, warm from the adjacent super up-to-date kitchen, plus cheese bites, so everyone is welcome to sample the fabulous fragrances.

JUDICIOUSLY, Dru decided to start forth with "just" a "Gourmet Garden Breakfast" (9-11 a.m.) all week. The full treatment is a double thick orange juice, choice of coffee, tea, milk, hot chocolate...cowboy scrambeled omelette, plus marvelously satisfying accompaniments...Canadian bacon and, of course, Dru's hot homemade bread and jam. Dru prefers El Salvador, very finely powdered coffee, strong and rich with the eye-awakening alert of Turkish coffee.

As we've already mentioned, Dru is versatile and caters to many tastes. Teas are fragrant, made more so exquisitely with a choice of rainbow-hued sugar grains "of your own choice"...or every day British elevenish coffee break. To us, "Plum Crazy is our choice among many of the preserves and jams, followed closely with tangy Sevilla orange marmalade, preserved ginger and slivered blanched almonds.

Dru knows how to select her pretty young assistants who take over the Gourmet Garden's luncheon kitchen-wise. Kay Kline is directress, with Claudia Chester her "twin-in-work." Efficient, and also lovely hostesses in a la mode dramatically contrasting nuances, who greet and serve in a nonchalantly at-home manner. Personable, knowledgeable John Criddle is Dru's right-hand man and understudy. Despite Dru's infinite knowledge, she travels for new, yet antique, ideas to incorporate into Carmel's gathering "pour le lunch ou pour le 'petit' dejeuner."

Telephone rings: "How about a low-calorie bite today, Edith? You know that one we had last week was not even delicious...yet with my eyes squinting through those new lashes..I think I gained." "You said think, Paula? Although Pouffie and I have an engagement with the most handsome young 'vet' I'll meet you at Dru's Carmel Keeping Room, between 5th and 6th on Junipero at high noon. I am starved!"

AS EXPECTED, overweight Paula, in a tight-fitting shift, chose Breast of Turkey salad strewn with pineapple bits, bedecked with Dru's pineapple cottage creme dressing (low-calorie), homebaked bread, baked and hot. Her companion in a loose mumu chose Salinas Valley salad served in a great wassail bowl of fresh string beans, tomatoes, cucumber, green bell pepper, onions, in a scrumptiously seasoned oil and vinegar seasoning.

All luncheons include chicken broth, beverage and rum pudding cake. One fares well at Dru's.

In the planning stage is the Supper Club, so popular in Carmel Valley's Keeping Room. It takes Dru and staff three days to prepare these gourmet meals where one really dines in true elegance.

Some of Dru's favorite, self-invented recipes served at Carmel's newest garden cafe:

POT AU FEU, COUNTRY STYLE

In a nice big soup pot place: 3 lbs. chicken wings, necks and backs, 3 lbs. lean short ribs, 4 tbsps. Dru's Serendipity salt. Bring to a boil, then turn down to medium. Cook gently 3 hours. Strain. In the broth place 2 chopped onions, 4 scraped carrots in 1 inch pieces, ½-inch slices of young celery stalks, 4 medium potatoes in one-inch cubes. Cook gently until tender but not mashed. Add, fat and gristle removed, the beef cut in good-sized cubes. Serve hot with sour French bread. This is nectar of the Gods.

DRU'S SWISS QUICHE LORRAINE

For a 9-inch pie: in blender mix 4 whole eggs, 1 tbsp. Bisquick, 1 cup milk, one-third cup chablis wine.

Make pastry by mixing 1 cup butter in ¼ vup ice water. Let rest ½ hour. Roll on floured board, fit into pie plate, making heavy rim on crust. Shred ½ lb. Swiss cheese and spirnkle over 4 slices Canadian bacon. Cover with the custard, put in 350 F. oven for 40 minutes or until silver knife comes out clean. Cut in wedges for lunch with a green salad.

One of the most attractive accessories Dru sells are hand-screened delicate place mats which are fade, soil and wrinkle resistant. These are machine washable and no ironing is necessary. In varigated shapes, designs and celestial colors.

So hurry to Dru's where originality and superior taste permeates this charming place.

Whatever you're shopping for, the first place to start is the Yellow Pages of your phone book. You'll quickly find the most convenient store in your area selling the item you're looking for. You'll also find out which stores are authorized dealers for certain brands, which accept credit cards and what their business hours are. Calling the dealers to ask for specific information is often the next step, but sometimes you'll find out everything you want to know just by reading the Yellow Pages of the Monterey County Telephone Directory.

Even if you don't like to write letters, you can still keep up with friends and family—by telephone. And it's not that expensive either, especially if you take advantage of the low evening and weekend rates for long distance calls. And of course it's always cheaper to make a station call instead of a person call. Just check the front pages of your phone book to find the calling hours that are easiest on your pocketbook.

AGENT / ALLIED VAN LINES

Petpourri

BY JUDITH EISNER

We saw a Siamese cat riding in a Volkswagen bus on Ocean Avenue yesterday, and that reminded us that it was time once again to think about taking your pet along on your vacation.

If your dog or cat is accustomed to joining the family in its activities, enjoys auto rides and is reasonably well behaved, taking the pet along on vacation is often the most satisfactory solution.

Thousands of animals travel each year -- by car, plane, train and ship. There are dogs and cats who are regular contestants in the showring and who travel "circuits", from city to city for the purpose of being exhibited. They spend their nights in motels with their owners and handlers, their days in station wagons and trailers "on the road."

The problems of travelling with a pet are more concerned with prevention than anything else. Even more than at home, you must realize and fulfill the responsibilities of pet ownership when you travel to strange places with an animal.

In the first place, you must accept the responsibility for controlling the animal at all times. Secondly, you must watch out for the animal's health, safety and well-being. Third, you must be constantly on the alert to make sure the pet does not create nuisances that not only annoy other human travelers, but that may prejudice people against the next pet that comes along.

If you are planning to fly to a vacation spot, most airlines are knowledgeable, helpful and equipped to accommodate your pet. In many instances, the animal flies on the same plane as his master, under the designation of "accompanied baggage" and at reduced rates. The airlines can help you with your individual needs.

Auto travel, with nightly stopoevers at motels, requires the greatest preparation for the pet owner.

You may want to pack a simple kit for the traveling pet. His food dish, comb and brush, blanket, toys, a can opener, and any other simple sundries can easily be stowed in a small bag. Any pet that "hits the road" should be equipped with a strong and well-fitting collar and leash. A worthwhile precaution is an identification tag that bears the owner's home address and phone -- if there is someone at home during your absence -- or, if your home is vacant, the name, address and phone of someone who can be reached should the pet be lost.

A current license tag from your home city should also be affixed to the collar. Since licenses are usually issued only to animals vaccinated against rabies, the license is generally sufficient proof of vaccination.

Tuck in with your papers a copy of his rabies vaccination certificate and a health certificate made out by your veterinarian prior to your trip.

You should have at least one good-quality leather leash and a tie-out chain that cannot be gnawed through. If you need to secure your dog -- say in a National Park -- it's nice to know that he'll be there when you return.

For cats, a sturdy cat carrier is almost a must for car travel and for confining the cat in motels or other places. Cardboard carriers are not dependable; you should invest in a wood and wire carrier at the very least, or in a steel one.

There are disposable cat litter pans available in supermarkets and you should have some in the car and purchase more along the way as needed. You cannot turn a cat out in a strange location each evening without courting disaster; you must provide for his needs.

If you pet eats any of the major brand names of pet food, you will be able to purchase them along the way. And, unless you are only going to be gone for a day or two, there's no practical reason to bring along water from home. Dogs and cats adjust to water changes with ease in most cases.

While driving, the dog should be made to sit or lie on the back seat, with his head inside the car. Permitting him to ride with his head out and ears flapping can cause ear and eye inflammations and foreign bodies to lodge in the eyes. Cats should travel in their carrier in moving cars.

You should not leave a leash dangling from a dog's collar in a moving auto. Should he be thrown off the seat by a sudden stop, he can be strangled by a tangled leash.

You will have to stop occasionally to exercise your dog and provide water for both dogs and cats, especially if the weather is hot and the car not air conditioned. Unless your cat is leash broken, we do not recommend exercising cats in unfamiliar territory.

If the human travelers stop for lunch or coffee or sightseeing, remember to park the car in the shade and leave at least two inches of window open all around. Cars rapidly become overheated even in moderate sunshine, and dogs and cats are prone to heat prostration. When you stop, try to park (and lock) the car in a spot where you can keep an eye on it during your break.

Your pet will be able to accompany you to most places you visit with the exception of indoor places such as restaurants and museums. Make it a point to try to take him along as much as possible, rather than leave him behind in the car.

Local family offers new life to Colombian girl

Mr. and Mrs. George Wandman, Box 5523, Carmel, are sponsoring Aura Maria Gomez, a 13 year old girl from Colombia, through Save the Children Federation, Norwalk, Conn., it was announced by Glen Leet, executive director.

"May I express my deep appreciation to these new sponsors for offering to the needy a chance for a new life. Federation sponsorships are based on the idea of self-help, encouraging children, families and communities to assist themselves and each other in attaining social growth and economic fulfillment," declared Mr. Leet.

The Federation believes that a child's environment shapes his life. Therefore, sponsorship stimulates the family and community to carry out needed self-help projects of their own choosing to become more prosperous and eventually self-sufficient. The objective is that the child will have a better opportunity to step into a more promising future and to do it in a way that strengthens his security in his relations with his parents and the community.

The Federation's self-help process shows the underprivileged that they themselves can do something about their poverty by using their natural resources and working to their full potential.

It also provides professional counseling for the needy families of sponsored children and technical assistance with self-help projects undertaken by members of the community in which sponsored children live. Sponsors receive a photograph and history of the child they help and also periodic reports on the progress of the youngster spurred on by self-help assistance. Sponsorships are assigned on either a grant or loan basis.

The Federation currently administers more than 17,000 sponsorships of children in the United States and overseas.

LOOMIS WINE CELLARS, Carmel, recently opened its new premises on Ocean Avenue with an official Wine and Cheese Tasting to mark the occasion. AMong those attending were Carmel's mayor, Barney Laiolo, Mayor Al Madden of Monterey, and Russ Kingman, director, Jack London Square Association. In his search for Jack London memorabilia, Kingman came upon this handsomely sculptured head of the Carmel poet George Sterling, a close friend and associate of Jack London. The replica, presented to Mayor Laiolo, will hang at City Hall for all to see and admire.

BACK FROM a two-week cruise to the 50th state via the Inland Passage to Alaska are Carmelites Mrs. Julian (Dorothy) Von Meier (left) and Mrs. Floyd (Gwen) Adams. The ladies were awed by the grandeur of Glacier Bay as they steamed past ice blue glaciers and floating icebergs. On shore, they saw the Cape Fox Indian dancers and visited the totem poles in Monument Valley and the Mendenhall Glacier near Juneau. In spite of rain and mud due to "rather primitive" street conditions, the ladies enjoyed the luxury of a restful cruise and the fascination of Alaska.

Carmel library to get $18,780 aid from county

Carmel will receive $18,780 from Monterey County for the operation of its library under terms of a contract approved Tuesday by the Board of Supervisors.

The funds are a portion of $60,000 which the supervisors authorized to support County library services in King City, Salinas, Pacific Grove and Carmel. The city of Monterey has not reached any agreement with the County, saying that its costs for providing library services to residents outside the Monterey city limits far exceed the funds available from the County.

Carmel will receive 31.3 percent of the available funds, just slightly below Salinas, which is highest with 31.9 percent.

The allocations are made on the basis of how many persons outside the city limits use the library's facilities. For Carmel, the non-city users total 70,800.

This compares to Salinas with 72,200, Pacific Grove with 44,700 and King City with 38,400.

If Monterey does not agree to provide some County library services at its main library, the Carmel library is expected to be in even greater demand by persons living outside its city limits.

The funds are being provided for the next fiscal year, during which the County will study library operations to see if it should increase its financial assistance.

Kiwanis hears talk by Canadian diplomat

The Canadian Consul assigned to San Francisco, Jim S. Nutt, was guest speaker at the Carmel Kiwanis Club's luncheon last Thursday at the Pine Inn. Nutt was a World War II flying partner in the Royal Canadian Air Force with Kiwanis president Dick Shaw.

Mr. Nutt commented that the United States and Canada have always been able to solve their mutual problems amicably.

On a recent trip to Alaska, Mr. Nutt stopped at Old Crow and White Horse in the Yukon territory. "Even up there they are worried about pollution," he said.

Commenting on some of the problems native to his country, Mr. Nutt explained that nearly one-third of the population considers French their native language. In a country where English is the official spoken tongue, this has created many serious problems.

Canada has no draft, explained Mr. Nutt, which is why boys from America seeking to escape the draft are accepted into that country if they are otherwise qualified. "The United States should stop them at the border," he added.

Canada is highly dependent on her ability to export, he said, and United States imports are important to her economy. Many industries in Canada are owned or controlled by United States corporations.

"Living next to the United States is something like sleeping with an elephant," quipped Mr. Nutt at the close of his speech.

Two street improvement projects to cost $20,000

The city council at its meeting last week passed resolutions authorizing the expenditure of $20,000 for two street construction projects that are already underway.

Both projects will be financed by available gasoline tax funds.

The first project is for the improvement of Monte Verde between Ocean and Seventh. The other is for the reconstruction of the east side of Junipero between Seventh and Eighth.

Also at the meeting, Mayor Barney Laiolo announced that the council has decided to install a four-foot wide asphalt paving with a burm on the east side of Junipero between Seventh and Eighth. Residents on the side of the street have asked for some kind of a sidewalk area.

The paved area will not include curbs or gutters.

Dorothea Roberts, a planning commissioner, told the council she would object to any kind of sidewalk unless it is a meandering path.

The mayor said that's what the pavement would be.

"Not four-feet wide," Mrs. Roberts said.

Letter

Letter to the Editor:

Thank you, Sisters...for keeping the channel to God open so directly and with such beautiful simplicity.

The visit with the Carmelite Nuns in your feature article reminded us of the bountiful blessings our area derives from the Monastery which is so conveniently located on the hill east of Highway 1, two miles south of Carmel.

Can we ever begin to measure the peace and hope that the distant sight of this handsome Chapel has imparted to persons of all beliefs...as they drove by.

The Nuns invite us to come closer...all of us.

If anyone ever should wish to experience true moments of peace, the Monastery Chapel's doors are always open between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Go, and just visit. Maybe there are a few things to talk to God about...simply...and in His peaceful presence. How wise, since God knows us far better than we know ourselves.

$2,820,300 budget approved:

No increase seen in Sanitary District tax rate

The Carmel Sanitary District was expected to approve a fiscal 1971-72 budget calling for expenditures of $2,820,300 at a special meeting yesterday.

The three-phase budget was presented at Tuesday's meeting of the board.

District President Harold C. Arnot said that based on a district assessed valuation of $53 million plus, "the tax rate may be one or two cents more than last year."

Last year's district tax rate was 34 cents.

The budget is broken down into three segments: construction fund, running expense fund and bond redemption fund.

The construction fund, which includes construction costs for a new secondary treatment plant, calls for a total expenditure of $2,145,000.

The district has $1 million on hand from the sale of bonds and will receive $314,300 from the Pebble Beach Sanitary District.

If the district receives $960,000 in promised federal grants, the construction fund would have a total income of $2,274,000, which would be $129,300 more than is needed to cover expenditures.

The running expense fund includes maintenance and operation of the plant plus the $263,300 cost for a new 600-foot ocean outfall line. Total expenditure in this bracket is anticipated at $566,800.

Income will come from the district tax, a $305,000 cash balance from the 1970-71 budget, $26,000 from the annexation of Del Mesa Carmel, and $36,000 from Pebble Beach.

The bond redemption fund, with an income of $313,000 made up of a cash balance of $110,000 from service charges for this fiscal year and an estimated $203,000 for next fiscal year service charges, lists an expenditure of $108,300 for fiscal 1971-72 and $111,100 for fiscal 1972-73 for bond redemption. That leaves a plus balance of $93,600.

The budget is now passed on to the county for verification and approval.

In other matters, some closely related to the budget:

Director James Pruitt asked that if federal funds did not come in could the district borrow from the county rather than sell the remainder of the $2.4 ($1.4 million) million in bonds authorized by voters.

Shelburn Robison, the attorney for the district, said the district could borrow up to 20 percent of its assessed valuation from the county.

Earl Moser, vice president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, requesting permission to ask a question, agreed to the board's request that it be answered at the July 6 meeting.

Moser said that in March he talked with two members of the State Water Resources Control Board in Sacramento and they assured him that two tests would be conducted concerning the new outfall: (1) to determine "what the marine biota" was in the bay before effluent from the outfall, and (2) then a study afterwards to determine if the effluent was harmful to the bay.

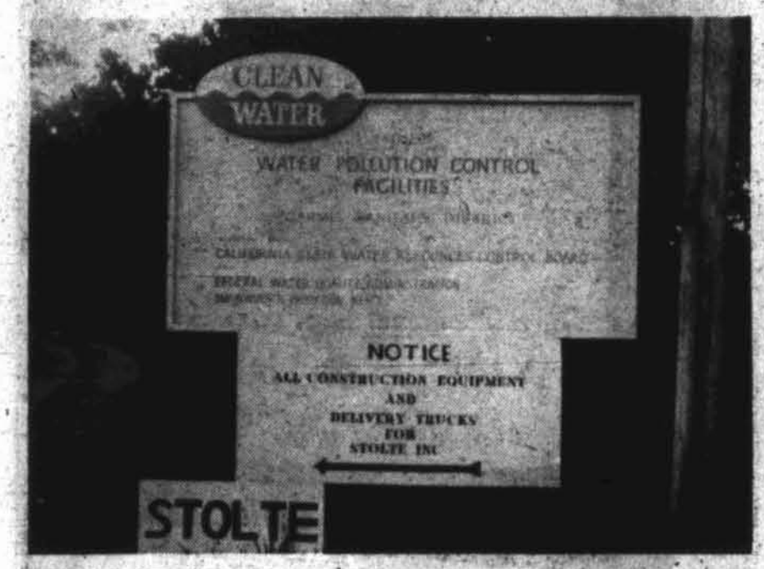
Arnot assured Moser he would get his answers.

Robison reported that $50-an-hour attorney fees to fight a suit against the district by Tom Hudson, which was eventually dismissed in Superior Court, amounted to $5,830.

"I was surprised at this (the high fees) myself," Robison said, adding, "This means Mr. Hudson is costing the district the amount of money that could be raised by a tax levy of one cent."

"These court costs are getting out of sight," Arnot said, "They're worse than hospital fees."

Hudson, who arrived late, was not on hand to hear Robison's comment.



STAMP OF APPROVAL? This recently installed sign to the entrance of the Carmel Sanitary District plant, where a new secondary treatment plant is being constructed, carries the legend "Assisted by California State Water Resources Control Board and Federal Water Quality Administration." Stolte is the Oakland construction company that is building the plant.

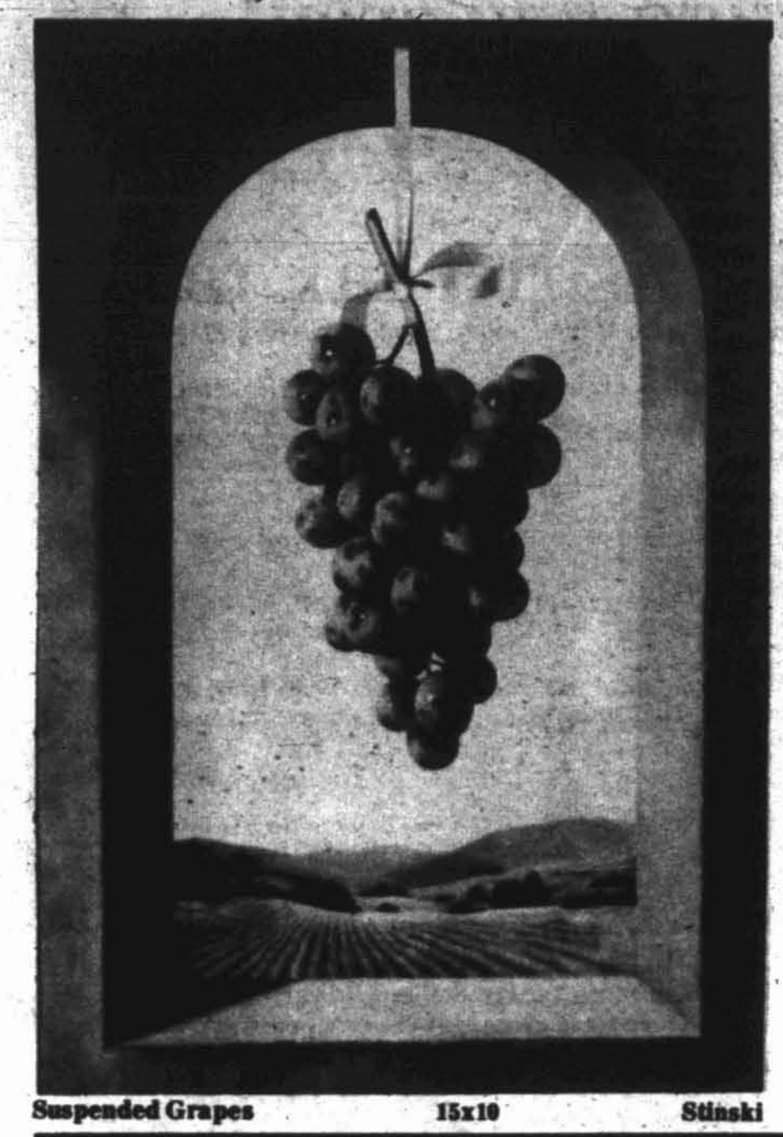
Stinski, Ridenour at Zantman's



Suspended Grapes 15x10 Stinski

The Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel is hanging a spectacular two-artist show beginning Saturday. Featured will be the realistic still life paintings of Gerald Stinski and the batik art of Dorothea Ridenour.

Stinski has a remarkable ability to achieve intense realism in his rich miniature oils that are haunting in effect, yet subtle in mood. His success has inspired several artists to produce small works of still life.

The art of "writing Batik" has come to the west from Java and China, where silks were embellished with the use of dyes and wax. Dorothea Ridenour is recognized for her mastery of this art. Her works rely greatly on the natural beauty of the silk combined with the generous use of rich colors.

Both talents will be featured at the Zantman Art Galleries in Carmel through July 10.

One man show of oil paintings by Klingler at Estella Gallery

A one man show of recent oil paintings by Gary Klingler opened last week at the Estella Gallery in Carmel Rancho Center, Carmel Valley Road and Highway One, and will continue through July 15.

Born in Santa Monica, Klingler studied at El Camino College, Cal State Long Beach and the University of Missouri. Among the numerous awards to his credit are the first place award in painting at the University of Missouri Student Art Exhibit, 1964, and a similar award at El Camino College.

He has exhibited at galleries in Southern California and in Missouri. Locally, his work has been shown at the Pebble Beach Art Gallery, The Artist's Palette Gallery, Brown's Fireside Gallery and the Lincoln Gallery.

Speaking of his work, Klingler said: "For me, creating the painting is the final experience. Usually I have a general idea of what I want to say before I begin a piece of work and as I complete the painting the idea becomes a reality. The inspirations for my paintings are derived from a variety of sources that I experience in life. While my paintings are varied in technique, I work only toward the final result, that of creating a true visual experience."

Clark to teach

Robert Clark, landscape painter and familiar figure in the Carmel and Peninsula area, will be guest instructor at a two-week "Art Festival '71" workshop planned by the San Luis Obispo Art Association July 12-25. The workshop will be held at the I.D.E.S. Hall on Mill Street in that city.

Clark will teach landscape painting and composition. He received his formal training at the Minnesota School of Art and the Walker Art Center. His work has developed from early surrealism, usually done in oil, to a representational style that displays his mastery and understanding of the egg tempera medium. Clark's paintings are in many private collections and his commissions include several large murals. He is represented in Carmel by the Zantman Art Galleries.

Other classes offered at the "Art Festival '71" include printmaking, life drawing, design, silk screen, macrame, tie-dying, batik, leather craft, jewelry, weaving and children's classes in puppet-making and ceramics, among others.

Application forms or further information may be obtained by writing the Art Center Workshop, P.O. Box 813, San Luis Obispo 93401.

The biggest non-event benefit of the season, "A Time to Remember," will be held...well, pretty soon...at the famous old Del Monte Hotel in Monterey which was razed by fire in 1924.

The non-event will feature a sparkling array of celebrities doing their own thing.

For instance. On the evening program...

...Blessing of the Indian Arts and Crafts by Father Junipero Serra...Bach Cantana No. 101 by the original Bach Festival Chorus and Orchestra, conducted by Gastone Usigli...Poetry Reading - "The Women of Big Sur" by Robinson Jeffers...Panel Discussion - "The Theater Today," moderator Maurice Brown, panelists Edward G. Kuster, Hazel Watrous, Dene Denny, Herbert Heron, Martin Flavin..."The Cannery Row Experience," John Steinbeck, Lee Chang, Doc Ricketts and Dora...

And Selections from South Pacific, Ezio Pinza, tenor...Selected Readings from "Treasure Island" by Robert Louis Stevenson..."The Early Works of the Fauvre Period," Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas...Discussion of "The Changing American Scene," panelists Sinclaire Lewis, Lincoln Steffers, Charles G. Norris and Harry Leon Wilson...Request Performance "A Midsummer Night's Dream" starring Rudolph Valentino, Mae Marsh, Ramon Navarro, Jeanne Eagles, Douglas Fairbanks and other Hollywood guests at the hotel...Final Benediction, knee deep in Carmel Bay, Amy Semple McPherson...

But do you think that's all? Do you? Heck no.

The gaming room will be open for billiards with Governor Pio Pico, Mayor Jimmy Walker, Gaspard de Portlas and many others equally as colorful for games of poker or Ma' Jongg.

A distinguished exhibition of paintings, sculpture and photography representing such artists as Sydney Yard, Edward Weston, Paul Mays, Louis Mayer and Jo Strong will be hung throughout the hotel.

But do you think that's all? Do you? Heck no.

There will be exhibition tennis matches featuring such stars as Big Bill Tilden, Little Billie Johnson, the Kinsey Brothers and the Bounding Basque.

And celebrity golf with Johnny Farrell, Walter Hagen, Dr. O.F. Willings and Marion Burns Horn, among others.

And Pat Rorak, Hugh Drury, Marquis de Portago and Tommy Hitchcock playing polo.

But do you think that's all? Do you? Heck no.

You'll be able to stroll through the "Maze" and come to the lovely lobby for tea from 4 to 6 p.m. Joining you for tea will be, among others, Edgar Lee Masters, Thomas O. Larkin, George Sterling, Walter Colton, Herbert Hoover and his wife the former Lou Henry back to visit her Monterey birthplace, and so many others.

But do you think that's all? Do you? Well, yeah, that's about it, and it surely should be enough.

I mean, after all, "A Time to Remember" can be easily reached from your favorite armchair, and you won't have to buy your wife a new ball gown or a diamond tiara.

There are six different kinds of tickets that can be purchased for this event—

—Diamond Circle, $50, includes all of the events named so far plus a round trip in the Del Monte Ltd. parlor car, including refreshments and your own limousine transported by the new Del Monte freight service and waiting for you at the station.

—Golden Circle, $25, same as above without limousine transportation but met at the depot by the Del Monte carriage.

—All sports and evening events, $15.

—Dinner, concert and dancing, $10.

—Concert and dancing only, couple, $7.50, single $5.

Send your check today for the particular event you do NOT want to attend. The original drawing of the Old Del Monte Hotel by Mary Agnes Landsdowne will be sent to the person making the largest contribution.

Checks should be sent to the Arts Coordinating Council of Monterey County (and made out to same), P.O. Box 2344, Carmel 93921.

Because, the truth is, without your help the coordinating council will not be able to continue its Monthly Calendar beyond August, let along the great artistic traditions to which this area has become accustomed.

Such an event would be a time not to remember.

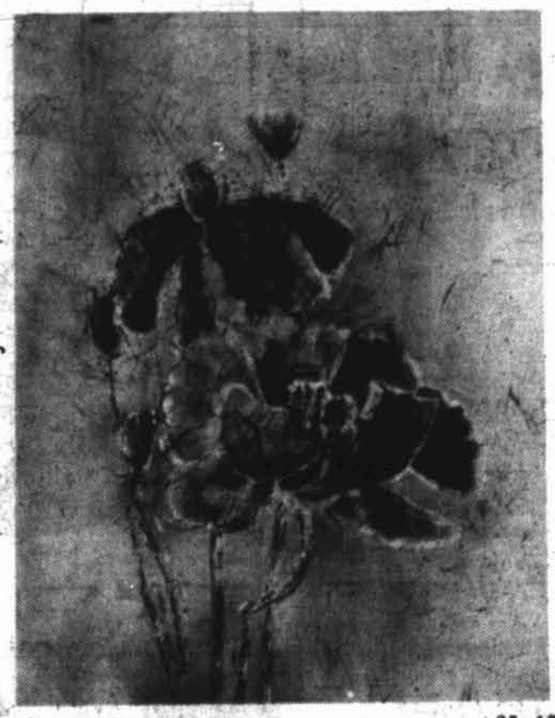
An Exquisite Exhibit For Two American Artists

DOROTHEA RIDENOUR
Refined art of Batik on silk



ORIENTAL POPPY 25x17

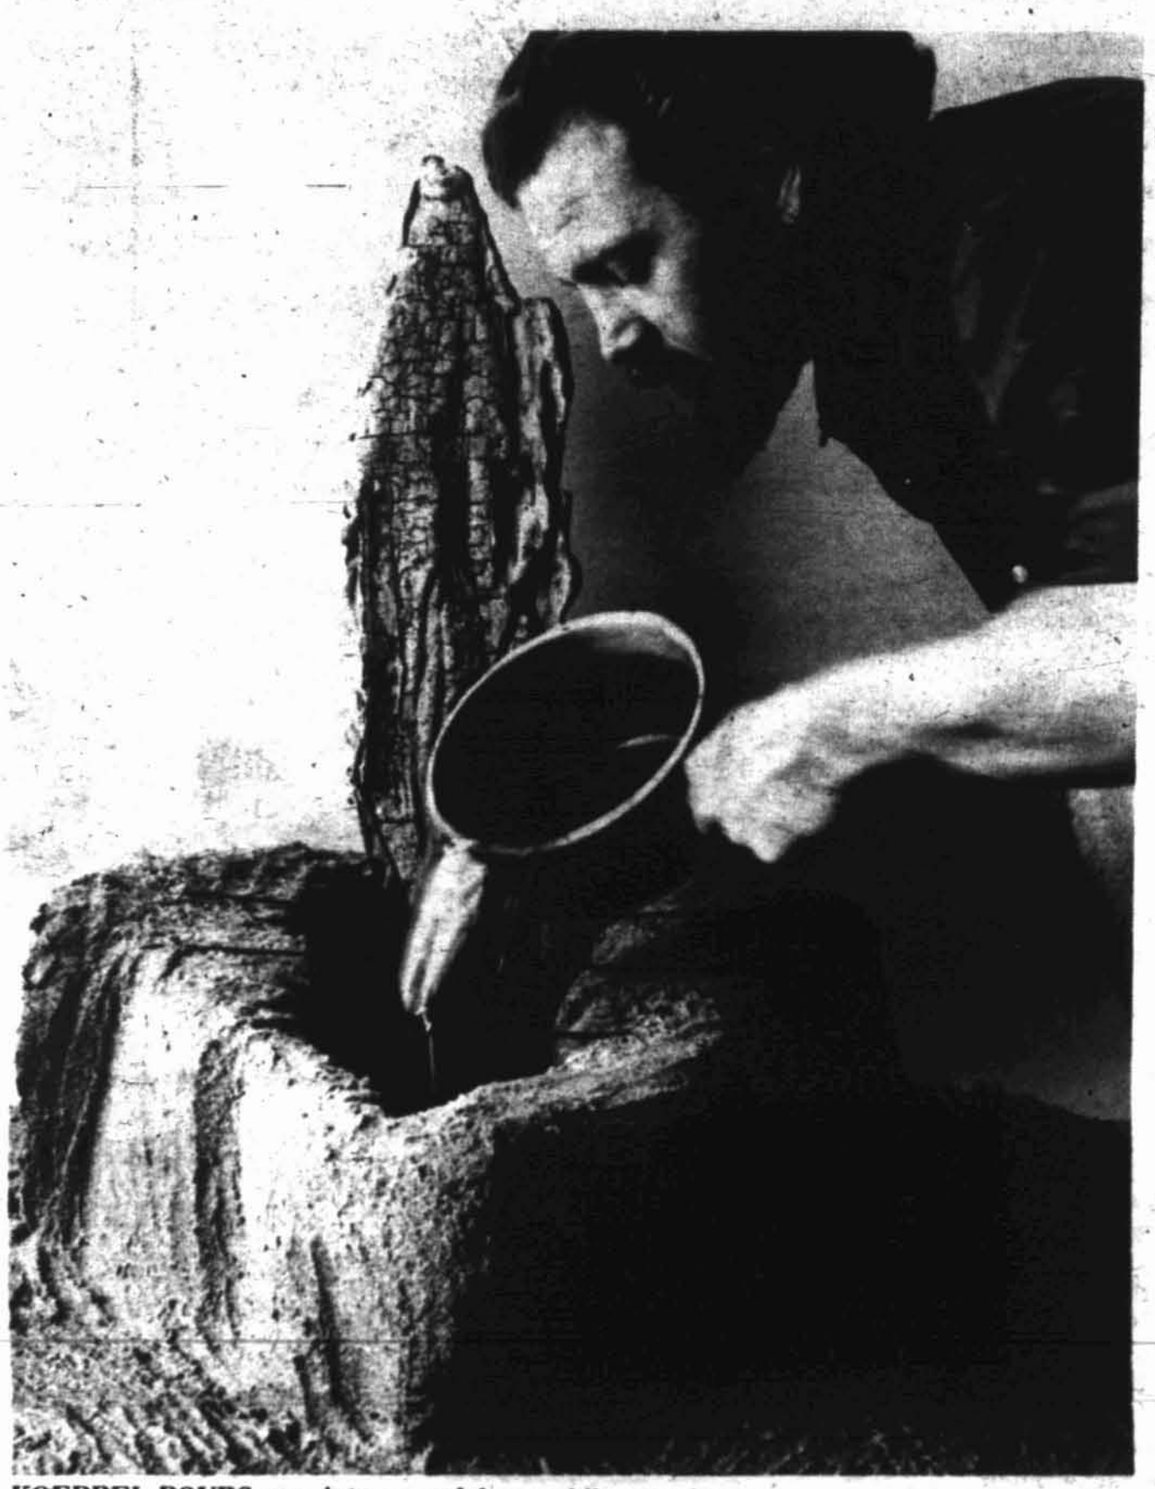
Dorothea Ridenour's batiks carry the aura of things that have mellowed with age. She has found the secret of overall quiet sparked by rich color. A thought she likes to leave: "A glance at a beautiful object will quell for a moment the restless struggle we sometimes find within ourselves."

GERALD STINSKI
Unequalled still life paintings

SUSPENDED APPLE 11x5

"My paintings - hopefully - create an atmosphere around, behind an in front of my objects, thus presenting an air that is hauntingly real in effect and endlessly subtle in mood. I want my ministries to give visual and spiritual pleasure without having to furnish a written text as to its validity."

Coast Gallery will be run "by artist with business sense"



KOEPPEL POURS wax into a sand form while creating a free-form driftwood candle.

The art of hand-crafted candle making sort of slipped up on Gary Koeppel, the new operator of Big Sur's Coast Gallery, just south of Nepenthe.

"After I resigned from college teaching (he was an English instructor at Portland State College), I became a free-lance writer, and in the evenings I just started making some candles, because I enjoyed candles but you couldn't find candles that burned well - the wicks would burn down to a nub and it would just sort of go kaput! Or the wax was cheap and would burn down quickly . . .

"I always had a concept I wanted to try. That was to melt a piece of natural sculpture, driftwood, against the wax and provide the light source for the driftwood.

"I made several candles and neighbors and friends started coming by wanting me to make candles for them. Then people came by and wanted to buy them and I very slowly got into business."

This was three years ago in Topanga, one of the few areas in the vicinity of Los Angeles that hasn't felt the bit of the developer's bulldozer.

Koeppel's "business" has grown considerably since then, and so has his reputation as an innovator in the craft.

As far as is known, Koeppel is the first to cast wax and driftwood together, molding them to each other with heavily-textured sand which is sculpted into its own esthetic shape. Koeppel has developed a hardening chemical agent that is mixed into the sand. The sand sculpture is then sealed with the flame from a high-temperature torch.

Koeppel's sandcasting technique has drawn imitators and orders from throughout the country for the free-form driftwood sculptures which weigh up to 150 pounds.

Koeppel also feels he has brought "a modern sense of sculpture to this ancient form of sandcasting."

Because Koeppel thinks candles are for burning and just not gazing at, he designed three-inch diameter refills (all of his candles come with the first refill).

"The refill idea came about when I found people were not burning the candles, just looking at them."

While finding the properly-textured beach sand for his candles is not too great a problem, Koeppel finds himself doing a lot of traveling for his driftwood. He said there are six beaches between Malibu and Big Sur where the best pieces are to be found.

The driftwood is all-important. Koeppel never alters the natural form, and the piece determines the design and the color of the candles along with the number of wicks.

He has had his work displayed at the Disneyland Hotel Art Gallery, and has worked on location at last year's Universal Studio International Festival and the Fresno Fashion Fair. He will also sculpt on location this August at the Monterey County Fair in Monterey.

Otherwise, he works daily at the Coast Gallery, open to public view. Jewelers Gopher Albitz and Karl Lee also work daily at the gallery, while James Hunolt, who studied under Gordon Newell, and whom Koeppel refers to as an "excellent sculptor," does his work at the gallery primarily on weekends.

Koeppel says there is a basic change of concept in the gallery, which Koeppel has on a five-year lease from Layern Allen, who is in Spain, and which also features paintings of Big Sur and Peninsula artists, and that is that it is run by:

"An artist with a business sense rather than a businessman with an esthetic sense. In other words, the gallery is being operated, in a sense, by artists."

All in all, Koeppel, who is also in the publishing business - his Crazy Horse Books recently published by Oregon author-artist Sanford Goodman's "Incubator for Savages" - finds it a pretty good life.

He's a beachcomber, and making a fair livelihood out of it.

THE SCULPTED sand is hardened with a high-temperature torch.

"FIREBIRD": a finished, three-wick candle. The piece of driftwood has been left in its natural form.

SEALE AND POCAHONTAS

Alexandra Seale Whitaker Adams, a "delicate little girl" of six pounds and seven ounces born recently at Community Hospital, has quite a pioneering heritage in her family.

The Rev. Alexander Whitaker was one of the founders of Jamestown in 1607. He was also the man to baptize and marry Pocahontas. The Seale family was one of the original founders of South Carolina in the 1650s. And Adams was that famous Samuel.

The infant, the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adams of Twelfth and Lincoln, doesn't have to worry about being confused by all the names. Mrs. Adams says "We call her Seale."

Mr. Adams is the president of J.J. Adams and Son, Inc., on Monterey's Cannery Row, the largest supplier of rare coffees in the country.

YWCA PRESIDENT HONORS TEACHERS

Mrs. Everett Bibb recently gave a morning coffee reception at her Carmel home for the volunteer instructors from all parts of the Peninsula.

For the summer season, YW classes are not in session, but will be resumed, and extended, early in October. Any Peninsula resident interested in receiving the Fall announcement, or joining the new YW at a minimal membership fee, may telephone the office at 624-3506 or send a postcard to Box 2492, Carmel.

In order to serve women and girls and their families, in all seven cities of the Peninsula, the major objective of the YWCA Board is to establish a home-base within reach of the various communities. Contributions and memberships are being urgently sought, to help make a local YWCA the reality which has been planned for these past several years.

NAVY ENSIGN GALE DOORES, son of Mrs. V.L. Boehmer of Carmel, was commissioned to his present rank and received a bachelor of science degree last week during graduation ceremonies at the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

Girl Scout News

BY SUSAN FUHS

Cadette Girl Scout Troop 2158 of Carmel participated in the "Keep America Beautiful Day" clean-up on June 5 as 8 girls cleaned-up at Carmel Middle School. This litter clean-up project was sponsored by the Girl Scouts of the United States of America, the Boy Scouts, and Keep America Beautiful, Inc. The project sought to dramatize the extensiveness of the solid waste litter problem and to emphasize the fact that every person is responsible for a cleaner America.

This anti-litter campaign fulfilled the first requirement on the Conservation Badge for the following girls: Nancy Alden, Susanna Cappelli, Susan Fuhs, Debbie Huszagh, Laura Kodres, Barbie Leonard, Julie Lipman, and Wendy Thorpe. The group, under the supervision of Mrs. Emily Fuhs and Mrs. Lori Huszagh, picked up litter at the school, paying special attention to the main campus. A bat, softball, and base were were found and returned to the school. The ivy at the school also yielded large quantities of trash.

There will be 2 follow-up days on July 5 and August 5. Everyone is urged to help Keep America Beautiful by selecting an area to clean up.

Teague wins prize in cowboy art exhibit

Carmel artist Donald Teague was awarded second prize in the outstanding watercolor category at the sixth annual Cowboy Artists of America Exhibit at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. The prize, for his painting, "The Posse," is a silver medal and a $300 honorarium.

The Cowboy Artists Exhibit is the country's largest show of works by contemporary Western artists. Thirty artists from 11 states comprise the Cowboy Artists of America, who model their careers after the late cowboy artist, Charles M. Russell.

More than 100 works of art, including paintings, sculpture and drawings, portraying many moods of the West, will be on display at the Hall of Fame through September 10. The art works feature historic events, ranch life today, rodeo action and mountain and desert landscapes. Highly colorful Indian portraits and scenes of Indian customs are featured.

In addition to Teague's award-winning watercolor, local artist Jack N. Swanson of Carmel Valley is exhibiting at the show.

'The most crowded highway in America?'

The most crowded "highway" in America handles up to 250,000 travelers every 36 hours. The highway is the route into and out of hundreds of thousands of American homes taken by termites.

This termite traffic, according to Ailing House Pest Control of Carmel, is caused by the need of each insect in a household colony to get to the soil outside the house for moisture once every 36 hours.

Because termites cannot survive direct contact with air, they travel underground, from woodwork to soil where there is direct contact, through minute cracks in cement foundations or through mud tunnels they build.

Termite infestation in the average home numbers about 75,000, but this can grow to as many as 250,000 insects unless pest control treatment ends the traffic—and damage caused by the termites.

According to Dr. David L. Watson, chief entomologist for a Chicago chemical company supplying termite-control materials, "Chemicals used in termite control do not leach through the soil, and thereby do not cause a pollution problem in nearby rivers and streams or in the ground itself.

"We're glad to say there are no ecological problems involved in chemicals used for termite control. They stay where they are placed—in the ground under and alongside the foundation."

Our Churches

All Saints

An "Encounter with Books," a Book Fair "Dynamics," will be held by All Saints' Church next Thursday.

The book fair will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the parish hall at Lincoln and Ninth.

Books will be on travel, biography, history, reference, religion, classics, art, music and poetry, and "treasures."

"Loving earth foods" will be served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., and snacks and free babysitting will be provided.

Book donations will be gratefully accepted at the parish hall or call Dorothy Taugher at 372-7248 or Pat McEldowney at 624-6628 for pick-up.

The All Saints' Church parish picnic on July 4th will be an "ecumenical, ecological" event.

According to the Rev. David Hill, the picnic will be held in the Odello artichoke fields along the Carmel River to highlight the OLAF (Odello Land Acquisition Fund) project. Many parishioners are active in the project to preserve the property as open space.

Rabbi Abraham Haselcorm from Salinas has been asked to deliver the sermon the morning of the picnic and other clergy from the Peninsula will participate.

The picnic will begin at 10 a.m. Each family will bring its lunch. Beverages and ice cream will be provided.

Rev. Hill has also announces changes in the worship schedule to better meet the schedules of parishoners.

The Sunday eucharist will be at 5:30 p.m. instead of 5:15, and a Wednesday 6 p.m. eucharist will replace the Tuesday 8 a.m. eucharist.

Also, daily evening prayer is being changed from 5:15 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sunday services at the Santa Lucia Chapel in Big Sur will be at 10 a.m. instead of 9:30 a.m.

A newly-ordained Episcopal, the Rev. Floyd Frisch of San Jose, will be a guest of Carmel's Episcopal parish this Sunday.

A practicing attorney with Santa Clara County District Attorney's office, Frisch is a young example of the mixed profession. A student in seminary and later law school, he combines both vocations in the Santa Clara area.

He will celebrate the 9:15 a.m. eucharist and preach at 11 a.m. as guest of the rector, the Rev. David Hill.

Christian Science

The healing power of the Christ will be explored Sunday at First Church of Christ, Scientist, services.

Scriptural selection in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Christian Science" include these words of Christ Jesus: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth in me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father."

This passage will be read from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth's immortal idea is sweeping down the centuries, gathering beneath its wings the sick and sinning. My weary hope tries to realize that happy day, when man shall recognize the Science of Christ and love his neighbor as himself -- when he shall realize God's omnipotence and the healing power of the divine Love in what it has done and is doing for mankind."

The members of the Church, Monte Verde at Sixth, have invited the public to attend. The service begins at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

On Sunday's radio program in the Christian Science series, "The Truth That Heals" three cases of healing where x-rays and cardiograms had once shown heart conditions will be related. This program is called "Don't We All Need a Change of Heart?" The broadcast will be heard at 6:30 a.m. over station KRML.

Neale hears Vietnam war opponents at United Methodist conference

The Rev. Herbert W. Neale, pastor of the Church of the Wayfarer, Carmel, attended the California-Nevada Conference of the United Methodist Church held at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, June 10-13. Accompanying Rev. Neale was Leonard O. Carson of Pebble Beach, lay representative to the conference.

The California conference was chaired by Bishop Charles F. Golden, resident Bishop of the California-Nevada Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Bishop Golden announced the appointment of nearly 300 ministers for one-year terms, effective July 1, with Dr. Neale receiving appointment to Church of the Wayfarer for another year.

In business session, the Conference passed a resolution calling for support of the Hatfield-McGovern Act which would call for withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Vietnam by the end of this year.

Much interest at the Conference was centered on an orange parachute which was unfurled on a lawn as delegates arrived. It dramatized the action of the Rev. Douglas Smith, a young minister from Etna, who spend the conference weekend climbing to the 14,000 foot level of Mt. Shasta where he intends to remain for as long as a draftee would stay in Vietnam. The Conference affirmed its concern for him and prayed for the success of his mission.

At a special meeting of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, delegates heard Admiral Arnold E. True (USN Ret.) declare that "the U.S. could be out of Vietnam in three weeks if we really wanted to be." He said that people must mount a massive campaign to remove the American military presence from Indochina before our credibility before the other nations of the world is destroyed.

Wayfarer

"The Unangelic Mission" is the topic of the sermon to be given at 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. Sunday services at the Church of the Wayfarer.

Dr. Herbert W. Neale will deliver the sermon.

There will be Holy Communion this Sunday.

St. Philips

The Rev. George W. Schardt's sermon for 10 a.m. Sunday services at St. Phillip's Lutheran Church of Carmel will be: "Learn to Submit to the Lord's Will."

Church school is at 11 a.m.

Win an interest-free loan.

Or cash prize.

During UCB's Interest-Free Loan Sweepstakes.

To be eligible, all you have to do is fill out an entry blank at any one of our 235 offices. It's that simple – no purchase required. If you apply for a personal loan for any amount up to $10,000 and it's approved, you may win that loan interest-free. Or, if you really don't need a loan right now, you may win a cash prize equivalent to the interest on an average UCB Personal Loan with a two-year maturity. And, since there'll be one winner for every 50 personal loans approved for 3 months, there's no limit on how many people can win.

Of course, you're probably saying to yourself, "How can I apply for a loan now? With money so tight, I'd do better to wait for the economy to pick up." Well, we'd like to point out that, strange as it probably seems, just the opposite is true. Interest rates are now lower than they've been in years. While prices continue to rise. Which means that, if you borrow now, you'll actually save money in the long run.

So if you've been waiting to apply for a loan, you'd be wise not to wait any longer. Come in and talk to us today. No matter what you're in the market for – a new car, a boat, you name it – you'll find we've got a loan to suit your needs. Everything from a vacation loan that lets you wait 3 months to start repaying to a property improvement loan that finances 100% of your expense and lets you take up to 10 years to repay.

In fact, now that you know all the facts, there really is no time like the present to borrow, is there? Because even if you don't win our sweepstakes, you don't lose.

City's new sign ordinance survives tentative challenge

Despite a tentative challenge last week, City Attorney William Burleigh anticipates the village's new sign ordinance will remain as is.

The challenge arose when it was divulged by Chief Building Inspector Fred Cunningham at the Wednesday meeting of the planning commission that a Shell service station had a gasoline price sign in the window.

The commission directed a letter be written to Shell concerning its image and also anticipated court action.

However, on Friday station operator Donald Potter removed the sign from the window of the Shell-by-the-Sea station at San Carlos and Fifth and Potter said it would stay down.

As it turned out, Potter was not in violation of the city's new ordinance anyway—the sign had been put up before the effective date of the ordinance.

At the meeting, Cunningham said it had not been Potter's idea to put the sign up, that he had received pressure from his distributor to do so.

William Lomas, a senior investigator for petroleum products for the State Department of Weights and Measures, told the commissioners that if a service station decides to put up a price sign it is subject to conditions set up by the state.

When Lomas read off state minimums for the sizes of letters and numbers for such signs, Chairman Olof Dahlstrand said:

"There is a possible difficulty here. It sounds as though some of your minimum are close to our maximums."

The city's ordinance restricts the size of signs and also attempts aesthetic control. It applies to exterior signs and interior signs aimed at outside traffic.

BASIC REQUIREMENTS FOR GASOLINE PRICE SIGNS

BRAND NAME: Minimum height - 6 inches. Height of each letter to be no more than twice the width, except "I". All letters to be same size & color.

Word "GASOLINE" is required on sign, minimum height - 4 inches.

PRICE FIGURES to be all of the same size and color. Not more than twice the height of the brand name on sign. Fractions may be used if equal in size to one numeral.
27 9/10 is example only, any price may be used if the product advertised is available to customers at that price.

Words of description of the product may be included on the price sign if no larger than the size of brand name. Examples: REGULAR, ETHYL, 98 OCTANE, HIGHEST QUALITY, etc.

Color of all letters and figures to contrast with background coloring.

Decimal point with numeral may be used in lieu of fractions.

WHEW! Carmel's recently adopted sign ordinance gives the village the authority, if it wishes, to prohibit gasoline price signs if they don't meet the approval of the planning commission's design review committee. However, if the committee approves a price sign it must meet certain state minimum standards as far as size of letters and numbers. Take, for instance, these requirements stipulated for "Anykind" gasoline:

The Jaguar V-12 Is Born!

This is a breed of cat rarely considered timid, and it announces the most exciting automotive development in years—an aluminum V-12 engine.

Because of its inherent balance, the V-12's smoothness is almost uncanny. It idles in near silence. And its absence of vibration may even take some getting used to.

The cylinders have a very large bore and the pistons, a short stroke. Advantage: higher potential power with longer life. And the power is delivered through a wide range of engine revolutions.

An eye-opener: the V-12's transistorized ignition system. With no contact points to wear or foul, a major cause of engine tune-ups is eliminated.

Plus: fully independent suspension. Four-wheel disc brakes, power-assisted. Rack-and-pinion steering, also power-assisted.
